'Puzzled' Trudeau Roasted

UPI, CP

"Puzzled" Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday was the target of harsh criticism from Premier David Barrett over Canada's and B.C.'s bleak employment picture.

ROAD TO OTTAWA 72

Barrett's comments came in the wake of Statistics Canada's announcement that September's national unemployment rate was the highest in more than 11 years.

The government agency monthly report showed that 459,000 Canadians, or 7.1 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in September, a jump from 6.7 per cent in August and the highest since July, 1962.

In British Columbia 61,000, or 8.2 per cent of the labor force, were seeking jobs.

"The Liberal party does not deserve the vote of any working person in this country. Their economic policies have led to the huge unemployment problem and I would suggest that the Liberal party needs a severe spanking," Barrett said.

He added the provincial government will do all it can to alleviate unemployment through establishment of a special job-creating agency.

In Ottawa, Trudeau all but rejected implementing measures such as tax cuts to stimulate the economy and perhaps create more jobs.

Asked whether the government is puzzled over the high unemployment rate, Trudeau said, "Yes, I think a fair answer is to say we are puzzled . . . we are all the more puzzled because every other economic indicator shows that the economy is booming."

Campaigning in Trois Rivieres, Que., Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield promised Tuesday he would propose soon "specific measures to improve the performance of the economy and get the country back to work."

He told a news conference

Record 1,116 Stand

More candidates than ever before — 1,116 — filed papers Tuesday as nominations closed for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Progressive Conservatives had candidates for all 264 seats. The Liberals fielded 263, NDP 251, and Social Credit 164.

In British Columbia, Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and NDP all offer candidates for all 23 seats. The Socreds are four short. There are 20 minor-party and independent candidates running in B.C. ridings.

Hydro Workers Reject Pact

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro workers have rejected a proposal to end a province-wide strike by 12,000 employees which began June 21.

Bennett Returns

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former premier W. A. C. Bennett returned Tuesday night following a European holiday. Asked if he would take his seat at the special session of the Legislature opening Oct. 17, Bennett said "no comment."

Energy Board Eliminated

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

The New Democratic government ruled out nuclear power in the near future for Vancouver Island Tuesday and announced a widespread shakeup of B.C. Hydro adminstration and thinking.

In a major Hydro policy statement, promised by Premier Barrett soon after he was sworn in, Recreation and Conservation Minister Robert Williams said nuclear power was "some distance away" on the Island.

And he also announced a streamlining of Hydro's executive management committee and board of directors and said present chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum would retire Dec. 31.

Kiernan, Williston Fired

Other major points in the policy statement approved by cabinet Tuesday afternoon include:

● The B.C. Energy Board, which brought down a report on the power needs of B.C. till 1990, will be disbanded;

● Former Social Credit cabinet ministers Ken Kiernan and Ray Williston have been fired from the Hydro board of directors and executive management committee;

Indicative of a change in thinking toward Hydro, Williams also announced:

● Industrial power users will face higher per unit rates when current two-year contracts come up for renegotiation with the government;

● Hydro will be told to "clean up the mess" of the environment it leaves behind and this would probably force rates up;

● Domestic power users were not faced with an "imminent" Hydro rate increase.

● A full and detailed study will be made of routes for the further linking of the Island to the mainland power grid system.

Side with Keenleyside

Williams said the government would thank the members of the B.C. Energy Board — Shrum, Arthur Paget, James Sinclair, Dr. Harry Angus and Dr. Hugh Keenleyside — for their year of intensive effort and their appointments would be rescinded.

The NDP government sided with Keenleyside and consultants Montreal Engineering Company in opposing development of nuclear power on the Island.

In a press conference to announce government Hydro policy, Williams reiterated the consultant's view that B.C. should first develop its economically attractive sources of hydro and conventional thermal power.

By postponing its entry into the nuclear field, the province could take advantage of further advances in nuclear power technology that would be made in the meantime.

In the administration shuffle, Williams appointed himself to the executive management committee along with

Heath Planning Negative Tax To Help Poor

LONDON (CP) — In a surprise move, the British government has announced proposals for a radical overhaul of the income tax system which would cost the treasury nearly $3.25 billion and enhance the earnings of the lower paid.

In effect, the proposals call for a comprehensive streamlining of the current system to establish a kind of negative income tax with most of the increased credits going to those earning less than the national industrial average.

But the plan, set out in a government document Tuesday, is unlikely to take effect in any form for at least five years.

It will be studied by a select Commons committee and views of the public will be sought before any final decisions are made.

If the negative system is adopted, the present pay-as-you-earn system will be scrapped.

The aim is to bring together in one calculation what people pay to the state and get back in social security benefits as well as to eliminate many forms of means tests.

Under the current arrangement, personal tax allowances are set against income through a code system which tells the employer how much pay is free of tax. He then deducts tax from the rest of the employee's salary.

If a negative tax was adopted, the employee would pay a single rate of tax — 30 per cent — on his whole income but get a credit, instead of allowances, depending on his personal and family circumstances.

Where the tax credit was more than the tax due which could happen frequently with the lower-paid and pensioners the government would pay the difference.

Wine, Ale Go Back to Uncle Ben

Apples Polished Off

It all looked "very nice," said Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he wasn't tempted.

Macdonald received several gifts from B.C. brewery magnate Ben Ginter of Prince George last Friday, and Tuesday he sent them all back except for four red apples.

Ginter
Offer . . .

In the box were samples of Uncle Ben's Duddle Duck wines, Wise Old Owl ale and 10 red apples.

As for the four missing apples, Macdonald explained in a letter to Ginter:

"The girls in my house swallowed them right down before I got home. I told them about Eve and her apple, but they didn't get the point."

Macdonald said the apples had caused "one heck of a domestic row" and a following vote on the return of the gift was tied two to two. The attorney-general decided his vote carried more weight than the others, and returned the remaining apples and liquor.

In his letter, Macdonald said:

"I appreciate good intentions but cannot help thinking of the alderman who received a gold watch from a city contractor. He sent it back saying —'If this is a gift it is too generous, and if it is more than a gift it is not enough.'"

And his parting word to Uncle Ben was, "Kindest regards, and I will be seeing you at the liquor vendor's."

Byways, Special Places Giant Parks Program

OTTAWA (CP) — A seven-point parks program announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien could double the existing $50 million annual conservation budget of the northern affairs department.

Chretien said it would be difficult to name a specific figure as details have to be worked out.

New aspects of the program would be establishment of a system of historic waterways historic land trails and scenic land routes.

The long-range plan will extend existing plans for canal systems, national marine parks, national landmarks and linear parks along Canada's remaining wilderness rivers.

Goal of the plan will be to "enhance the quality of Canadian life and to answer the demands of this country's growing and urbanized population for outdoor recreation," Chretien said.

The program, named Byways and Special Places, is to include a network of land and water routes used by Indians, fur traders and explorers and settlers.

In a film and booklets shown to reporters, emphasis is placed on the opening of large parts of Canada for travel by canoe, bicycle, by car along special low-speed routes, on horseback or on foot.

The booklet also showed maps of areas that could be included, but department officials stressed that details must still be worked out, particularly with the provinces.

Chretien mentioned one possible byway specifically, a special parkway from Quebec City to Georgian Bay, following the old fur-trading routes. But he added that such a program could take as long as 20 years to complete.

Chretien said that as well as taking Canadians to seldom-seen places, the program will give an economic boost to poorer areas.

Dog Salmon Order 'Insults' Indians

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

Port Alberni-area Indian chief Simon Lucas is tired of "getting the run-around" from government officials over Indian fishing rights and wants a confrontation with federal Environment Minister Jack Davis in Port Alberni today.

Lucas, chief of the Hesquiat band, said Tuesday night Indian discontent came to a head Monday when more than 200 Indians representing seven bands from the Port Alberni and Tofino area staged a protest meeting outside the Tofino federal government building. They were objecting to the way Indian fishing permits are being handled.

Indians have been granted permits each fall to spear, gaff or net salmon, rather than fishing for them in a conventional manner, so that they may preserve the fish for winter food.

The fundamental point at issue is that the Indians regard their fishing as a traditional native right and not, as Chief Lucas said, "some kind of privilege handed out by white men working for the government."

Indians in the area are particularly angry because the local federal fisheries representative has told Indians they may have permits this fall only for dog salmon and not sockeye.

Lucas regards this as rank discrimination. "The government men say there is a shortage of sockeye and we ask who made this shortage.

"I have talked with many of our old people and they say we welcomed the white men to our traditional fishing grounds and they came with big boats and big nets and now they tell us there is a shortage of fish."

Lucas is himself a commercial fisherman sailing out of Port Alberni and readily admits he is not personally affected by the problem. But he Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer and Shrum (until his retirement).

And he changed the membership of the eight-man board of directors except for John Steede and Shrum and added himself and Lorimer.

Heads to roll included Kiernan, Williston, John Dunsmuir, Einar Gunderson, Fred Mathers, and Frederick Smith.

Other appointments of directors would be made in the future.

Williams also followed the energy board report recommendations in saying that the government was not happy with the present structure of Hydro management.

He said possibly two general managers and a director of corporate planning would be appointed and the new chairman would receive more than the $40,000 a year paid to Shrum.

Asked about Shrum's replacement, Williams said the present Hydro chairman had indicated that he intended to retire at the end of the year and cabinet had accepted this.

The government already has several people in mind for the posting but the minister would not give any names or details.

Williams claimed the people of B.C. were subsidizing Hydro in several ways.

What he termed "cheap money" from federal and provincial pension funds — "the savings of the people" — was being used at a rate generally 1 per cent below current interest rates to develop Hydro.

Citizens' money was thus indirectly subsidizing the major industrial power users in the province.

Williams also said Hydro was being subsidized through general revenue. In future the power authority would have to compete for cash at prevailing interest rates.

"There is a real case for the industrial user paying more," he said after indicating higher rates would be applied to industry in future power-use contracts.

The bill for cleaning up the environment after Hydro projects had never been assigned to Hydro before but it would in future.

"We will have no more Skagits and no more Mica Dam situations," he said.

However, he warned the costs of tidying up would have to be shared among power users.

Asked if domestic power users — 28 per cent of the total number of consumers in 1972 who paid $84,926,714 for residential power — faced an imminent rate hike, Williams said "no."

He indicated that the small consumers were paying a disproportionately high rate for their power in comparison to industrial users, whose rates were low.

By increasing industrial rates, other fuels such as hog fuel "now wasted by pulp mills" might become more economic.

(In the B.C. Hydro annual report for the year ending March 31, 1972, industrial, commercial and bulk sales of power were lumped together for an income of $126,498,675 out of total revenue of $305,921,799. Industrial consumers comprised 47 per cent of the Hydro users and commercial users, such as stores, 21 per cent. (Bulk and other minor power users made up the rest.)

Williams also promised a detailed study on the northern power linkage route to the Island suggested for Kelly Lake and said tying the Island more closely to the major grid system was one of the major differences of opinion among the energy board members.

"It is a critical question whether the Island can be integrated with the rest of the system and there are tremendous advantages if it can," the minister said.

He did not agree with the energy board which ruled out such an integration and said the government favored the consultants' view that the idea should not be dismissed.

And in a passing quip, Williams said there would be no re-naming of existing Hydro facilities such as the Bennett Dam and provincial lakes.

"No, they are monuments and the previous government liked monuments," he said.

Williams wouldn't blame previous "mismanagement" for the shakeup.

He said it was more a lack of direction by the Social Credit government which amounted to "bad government" in the past concerning Hydro.

Gimmickry

THE gas-buying public is avalanched by claim and counter claim. The additive platformate is negated by F-310, dirty engine cleaners give way to super petrox or maybe even riboflavin and simethicone. The Madison Avenue sharpies dazzle us all with technical jargon. No-knock, less-knock, ping-free, ethyl-extra and lead-free.

The advertising battle is waged with millions of our dollars and the only real winners are those same happy hucksters from Madison Avenue. The hurry-up service of Gulf, the barrier-breaking extra mileage of Shell, Mobil's dirt fighter and the security of dealing with a man with the Texaco star. The brainwashing is never-ending, it obviously works.

IT FAILS miserably, however, with the proprietor of this corner only because of a driving habit of far too many years that isn't about to be changed by the fancy folder all of high pressure salesmanship. My automobile, once every week, runs precariously close to that frightening "E" on the gas gauge and the first handy station receives the business of replenishing the tank back to the comfortable "F" designation.

I am not swayed by the added bonus of pictures of NHL players, free car washes, glassware, cutlery, dinnerware, bingo or all-expense trips to Disneyland or the Flin Flon trappers festival.

In SHORT, the gimmickry leaves me as cold as it leaves the service station operators themselves. There is one major difference — I can knock the system, they, for obvious reasons, must accept the corporate decision and force a happy grin.

They must hide behind a cloak of anonymity when discussing their displeasure with the give-away deals. They, incidentally, are the ones who pay for the merchandise used to entice us onto a particular site. I've been told by service station operators the cost to them can exceed $1,000 per year and you know and I know that in the long haul, the added expenses show up on our petrol bills.

I BELIEVE it was in Edmonton that a service station operator advanced a better idea. He reasoned that inasmuch as the money was being spent, why not spend it in a constructive manner. Instead of giving a cheap tumbler to the motorist with every three bucks of gas, why not ring up a small donation to a worthwhile charity? Each oil company could pick a charity — say Texaco with the Heart Fund — and at the end of each month, pass along the total to that charity.

Makes a lot more sense than the way they're operating now and if you don't believe my assesment, ask your friendly dealer next time you pull alongside his pump.

He likes the system less than you like it . . .

THERE ARE first and second class residents of the municipality of Oak Bay. Every fall when those magnificent oaks drop their mantle, the leaf-gathering, the leaf-burning becomes a major undertaking. But some (most) areas of Oak Bay have it made. South Oak Bay, the Uplands area, get the advantage of street sweeping. The big machine comes along and does an excellent job of picking up the leaves and it is no secret the residents of those sections simply move the leafy accumulation into large piles on the roadsides.

For some unknown reason, however, the street sweeping service has never been made available to citizens of the Lansdowne area, both the slope and the upper area.

But a call to Mayor Frances Elford assures me this must surely have been an oversight on the part of the engineering department and yes, citizens of the aforementioned areas should and would get the same treatment this year.

Therefore, residents of Lansdowne, slope and upper, can now gather their leaves and instead of getting rid of them in hundreds of small burnings, move them out onto the streets for the big sweepers . . .

AMONG other things this Thanksgiving weekend, I managed to read a book entitled, "Fotheringham, Collected and Bound," a collection of columns by The Vancouver Sun's Al Fotheringham.

By their very calling, newspaper columnists are an egotistical lot and Fotheringham is no exception. He is, however, a thoroughly competent reporter, a word-picture master who delights in the pricking of stuffed shirts and the deflating of sacred cows. Delightful reading most of the distance from a man who knows the art of newspaper columning and who has honed the knowledge to a razor edge.

Aaron Tops Select Field

PARIS (AP) — Tommy Aaron of the United States overcame a shaky start Sunday and fired a final two-under-par 70 for a three-stroke victory and the $15,000 first prize in the Lancome golf tournament of Champions.

Aaron started the day with a four-stroke margin over Gary Player, but went one over par on three of the first six holes. Meanwhile, Player got a birdie at the fifth and after 60 holes they were even.

Aaron rebounded and finished at 279, nine under par.

Tom Weiskopf, also of the U.S., rode a blazing putter to five straight birdies on the last five holes and took second place with a final-round 67 and a total of 282. Player finished with a 70 for 283.

Arnold Palmer, another American and the defending champion, shot a final-round 70 for a 285 total and fourth place. Doug Sanders, also of the U.S., was fifth at 286 followed by Angel Gallardo of Spain at 287, Jean Garaialde of France at 292, and Donal Swaelens of Belgium last in the field of eight at 296.

Corneal Abrasion

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A few days ago I had a tremendous pain in my left eye and had to seek treatment at the hospital at 4 a.m.

I had been wearing my contact lenses that day for about 18 hours. (This is not unusual for me.) I am mystified because I don't know what it means. They didn't have time to explain it to me and I can't find it in medical books.

Do I have to go to an eye doctor for further treatment or will it heal itself? How could corneal abrasion have happened? I am 23 and have been wearing contacts (wear regular glasses, too) for seven years.

My husband's job takes him away from home 18 hours a day so I do read an awful lot. —J.S.

"Abrasion" means a wearing away. A corneal abrasion means that it was the cornea, or outer covering of the front of the eyeball, that got worn down.

Possibly nobody can ever tell exactly how it happened — but I would be surprised if your contacts didn't have something to do with it. Perhaps you got some very fine dust under one of them; perhaps not. Perhaps just the contact lens finally wore the cornea down.

Most wearers of contacts are warned at the outset that it isn't wise to wear them constantly. The amount of time they can be tolerated varies from person to person. It can take time before the damage makes itself known.

Yes, see an eye doctor until he tells you the cornea is healed. If, for instance, infection got into that abraded area, it could do real damage.

Eighteen hours a day is a long time to wear contacts, and I would suggest that you limit it to much shorter periods (if the doctor lets you resume wearing them at all). On those long reading binges, why not wear your ordinary glasses instead of the contacts? It will be that much insurance against possible future trouble.

Even after the damaged eye heals it wouldn't be a bad idea to have an eye specialist check the eye at intervals.

Susan Clings To Life

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Susan Bartolomei was 17 back on that warm summer night 1967 when she and her boyfriend Timothy Luce drove to a junkyard to find spare parts for his jalopy and their car broke down.

They accepted a ride from two 18-year-olds and Luce — the son of the Lake County district attorney — ended up dead. Susan was raped, beaten, shot five times in the head and left for dead in a ravine near Sonora.

Somehow, the girl dragged herself up an 85-foot embankment and lived to see the youths, Thomas Braun and Leonard Maine, put behind bars. The youths were charged with her abduction and Luce's death.

Today, Susan lies in her bedroom — which is decorated with pink ruffled curtains, a toy gorilla named George and pictures of Jesus — and she cannot talk or walk. She can neither hear nor see well.

One of the five bullets still is lodged in her brain, and her vocal chords were removed shortly after she was found, to keep her from choking to death.

Susan's mother, Buena Bartolomei, says her daughter never refers to Timothy Luce, and that might have been what locked her into a coma for seven months after the 1967 ordeal — "trying to get to where she could face it all."

Once in a while, Susan is carried out to the car and the family goes on an outing. If the weather is good, she sometimes does walking exercises in a backyard tank built by her father.

There is hope that someday Susan will be able to talk again with the help of a voice vibrator.

Britain May Delay Ulster Referendum

UPI, Reuter

Britain may delay until early next year a referendum which would allow the people of Northern Ireland to decide whether they wish to remain linked to Britain or to unite with the Republic of Ireland in some way informed sources said Tuesday.

Reports that voting on this issue may be held up brought an immediate charge from Protestant loyalist leaders that the British government is guilty of a breach of faith.

It had been widely believed here that the referendum would take place before local council elections to be held in late November or early December.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations, Irish Foreign Minister Patrick Hillery said Tuesday a political structure to settle Ulster's troubles must be open to Ireland as a whole.

"There is no way in which the pieces can be put together again so as to have permanent stability within a purely Northern Ireland setting," Hillery said in a policy speech to the general assembly.

In Belfast, a powerful explosion killed three youths and set five houses afire Tuesday night in a Roman Catholic section of Belfast.

An angry mob of 200 persons blocked police and troops from the scene of Tuesday's blast. Earlier in the day, a part-time soldier was killed and a man was crushed to death by a bus that overturned under a hail of stones hurled by youngsters — now known as the "children of hate."

The children stoned British troops who went to aid the man trapped under the bus.

A British army spokesman said a lone gunman shot Roman Catholic John Ruddy 50, seconds after he waved goodbye to his wife on the way to work in Newry, near the Irish Republic border. Ruddy, a part-time soldier in the largely protestant Ulster Defence Regiment, was the father of five boys and three girls.

Earth Near 'Catastrophe'

VIENNA (UPI) — Space scientist Werhner von Braun said Tuesday the world is "approaching a global catastrophe" that could be prevented by the use of space.

"Earth is a solitary spaceship with an unknown destination. It has 3.5 billion astronauts on board who are using up its resources without taking steps to replace them," von Braun said in a lecture at the 23rd International Astronautical Congress.

"We are approaching a global catastrophe," he said.

Reading his lecture in his native German as the Hofburg Congress Centre, said man could use space satellites for finding hitherto unknown resources.

They Miss Moon Trip

VIENNA (UPI) — The two Soviet cosmonauts attending the 23rd International Astronautical Congress here said they would have liked to have gone on a moon expedition.

Valery Kuvassov, who orbited Earth in 1969 aboard Soyuz 6, said, "Russian cosmonauts would very much like to go to the moon. But we are kept back. The tests we have been making from the ground have been solving the problems we have been envisioning. But, sooner or later, a manned Soviet flight will go to the moon."

Sperm Bank: No Interest

Colonist-Los Angeles Times Service

LOS ANGELES — More than 100 million calves have been conceived with bull sperm that has been frozen.

But so far it does not look as though frozen sperm banks have great appeal for most humans, not even those some authorities believe would greatly benefit.

David Sager, a medical technologist who manages a frozen sperm bank here, admits that while the procedure of obtaining and freezing a sample is about as inocuous as a pap smear is for a woman, "there's something about it that most people don't like."

Winnie 'Unconcerned' Over Lucitania's Fate

NEW YORK (AP) — The British liner Lusitania, whose sinking influenced the United States entry in the First World War, was carrying armaments and was stripped of naval protection when attacked by a German submarine, says an account in the Oct. 13 Life magazine.

The contentions were contained in an excerpt from a forthcoming book, Lusitania, by Colin Simpson, a British writer.

When the great four-stack liner set sail from New York May 1, 1915, with 1,959 persons aboard bound for Liverpool, a false manifest was filed to conceal its cargo of three-inch shells and rifle ammunition, Simpson says.

The writer says evidenee he has found in various archives shows the Juno, a British cruiser, was supposed to meet the Lusitania off the coast of Ireland but was withdrawn by order of the admiralty. The admiralty was aware that a German sub was operating along the route of the Lusitania, he said.

It is Simpson's contention that Winston Churchill, then first lord of the admiralty, and other top British officials were strangely unconcerned about the danger to the Lusitania.

Simpson implies that Robert Lansing, then deputy to U.S. State Secretary William Jennings Bryan, and the British were working together to get the U.S. to enter the war.

When the Lusitania was torpedoed May 7, 1,198 lives were lost. The writer says a second explosion of the munitions, not the torpedo, sank the liner.

—AP

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — Susan Bartolomei was 17 back on that warm summer night 1967 when she and her boyfriend Timothy Luce drove to a junkyard to find spare parts for his jalopy and their car broke down.

They accepted a ride from two 18-year-olds and Luce — the son of the Lake County district attorney — ended up dead. Susan was raped, beaten, shot five times in the head and left for dead in a ravine near Sonora.

Somehow, the girl dragged herself up an 85-foot embankment and lived to see the youths, Thomas Braun and Leonard Maine, put behind bars. The youths were charged with her abduction and Luce's death.

Today, Susan lies in her bedroom — which is decorated with pink ruffled curtains, a toy gorilla named George and pictures of Jesus — and she cannot talk or walk. She can neither hear nor see well.

One of the five bullets still is lodged in her brain, and her vocal chords were removed shortly after she was found, to keep her from choking to death.

Susan's mother, Buena Bartolomei, says her daughter never refers to Timothy Luce, and that might have been what locked her into a coma for seven months after the 1967 ordeal — "trying to get to where she could face it all."

Once in a while, Susan is carried out to the car and the family goes on an outing. If the weather is good, she sometimes does walking exercises in a backyard tank built by her father.

There is hope that someday Susan will be able to talk again with the help of a voice vibrator.

Winter of Discontent

"THERE IS NO REAL CONCERN," Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau claimed on Saturday, speaking in Hamilton, "about the increase in deficit financing."

He was referring to the alarming cost of unemployment insurance and the necessity to dip a billion dollars out of general revenue to meet the soaring and unexpected claims.

Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey, at the same time, insisted that the unemployment insurance program for which he is responsible is "actuarially sound."

It is simply not possible to justify such a claim in the face of the contradictory evidence. It has been necessary to make a treasury transfusion of $1,034,000,000 to keep the fund operative to this point. And of course this procedure must be followed as long as the critical job situation exists. Still Mr. Trudeau does not feel concern.

Actuarially sound the unemployment insurance plan may have been had it been possible to keep the total of workless within the 4 per cent bounds for which it was designed. But it was not. Indeed, there were already 6 per cent of unemployed when the plan was implemented. Employer-employee contributions were just not enough to pay the bill. The government must have known it at the time.

The 7.1 per cent of the work force unemployed last month disclosed by the bureau of statistics Tuesday is the highest since the harsh winters of the early 1960s. The record of the past four years contains no assurance that the unhappy experience will not be repeated. Indeed, it seems inevitable; because any chance of improvement against the seasonal trend is something less than likely.

If the prospect is aggravating to the taxpayers generally, it is something very much worse for the more than half-million Canadians who will face a winter without work. There were 762,033 claimants for insurance on file at the end of July.

The country can expect more bad news before election day. There is small chance of any reversal of the cost-of-living trend. Figures for August showed food prices soaring a record 7.5 per cent over the year and a 2.2 per cent rise in one month. For the year, at the end of August, the over-all increase in prices had risen 4.7 per cent.

It is doubtful that anyone will predict any decline for September or in the cold months to come. Economists warn that for relative stability prices must not be allowed to rise more than 2 per cent a year.

And yet the government has watched the index rise from the 100 base-point in 1961 to 141.7 last month without giving any serious thought to control and closing its mind to necessary pension adjustments.

There will be another body blow for Mr. Trudeau's administration when the bureau of statistics releases the total paid out in unemployment insurance up to the end of August. By then, too, it may be possible to forecast the employment situation through November to March and to estimate the horrendous cost of insurance to the nation under Mr. Mackasey's "actuarially sound" plan.

The government is blundering into a winter of dismal discontent.

Election Interest

THE FEDERAL ELECTION is less than three weeks away and campaigning should begin to perk up soon. It has been lacklustre so far. There has been little display of interest and no real concern shown openly on how the nation is to be governed — that is in British Columbia, if not in the eastern provinces. It is almost as though the voting public in the far west doesn't care what happens on Monday, October 30. Was the provincial campaign too much? Or were minds made up long in advance of the calling of the general election?

The latter could well be, but it still does not explain the dullness that seems to have surrounded the electioneering of all parties. Most of the talking has been left to the leaders, and it was only on the past weekend that some sparks was flinted from them. Some hecklers got Prime Minister Trudeau fired up in Oakville, Ontario, where he attempted to defend his administration's policies and made it quite clear there will be no compromising, not even in the fighting of inflation which has pushed unempolment to a record high.

The September 7.1 percentage figure had not been made known at the time he was speaking, but the 6 per cent jobless state of the country all year long apparently was not felt to be too serious. "Any group or any person who tries to concentrate the attention of the electorate on little things that are going wrong in the system is a person who is looking backwards," he is quoted as saying.

And, in true Trudeauese, his government "will not let itself be turned away from its course towards progress by all these bellyachers and poor mouthers in this country."

This brought a little more heat from Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield than he has shown in the campaigning, and moved him to reply in the same barrack-room vein. The "frigging and jigging" of statistics by the Liberal government on the unemployment insurance fund deficit had shattered its credibility, the Conservative leader said angrily in a Montreal interview. "The crucial question is who's telling the people the truth in this election and clearly Mr. Trudeau and his colleagues are not."

His outburst came before the September job crisis figure was announced, as did an attack on both Liberals and Conservatives by NDP Leader David Lewis on the general subject of work. Addressing supporters at Winona, Ontario, he predicted a worsening situation and said, "The voter will know beyond a doubt that the corporate welfare system devised by the Liberals and Conservatives has failed to create the jobs Canadians so badly want and need."

This could be the take-off point for some needed liveliness in the election. In fact, the one subject of jobs could very well take over the remainder of the campaigning. It should be the most important question of the election in the minds of the people.

"You won't find any job discrimination in Canada because of race, color or religion. Mind you, you won't find any job either."

Ottawa Offbeat

Out in the Open

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Correspondent

It's reasonably safe, now that Prime Minister Trudeau himself keeps coming back to it, to talk about Quebec separatism without being called a bigot.

For a long time it wasn't the wisest course to even hint of it here in the Capital where, in some small "l" liberal circles, worship of the "French Fact," as they reverently called it, became almost a religion.

To speak of separatism was to be a trouble-maker unless the precaution was taken to equate Quebec separation with what the rationalizers called Western "alienation."

It was unforgivable to suggest that separation was not something for Quebec alone to decide.

And to even hint that the other provinces, or even the federal government might have something to say about it, or perhaps, horrors! forcibly resist it, was to be regarded as a hopeless neanderthal imperialist.

But now that's all changed.

People out across the land, more courageous than cautious souls in Ottawa, have been putting it to the prime minister and he has been openly discussing the subject so long tucked under the Capital's rug.

That it was kept bottled up these past four years, with the prime minister only now pulling out the cork, might suggest to the suspicious that once again, as he did in 1968, he is running hard as the great unifier of a divided country, the one leader able to hold the country together.

So, okay, admit that, and it's still a plus that Trudeau's talking about it and in doing so, making public discussion of Quebec separation no longer distasteful but acceptable.

In Labrador City, the prime minister has said he doesn't think Quebec would separate, but if it should, then Canada couldn't survive.

"If the country were to break up in the middle as it were," he said, "I don't think much of it would remain together as a country.

"I imagine some bits would become independent on their own and other bits would become annexed to the United States or ask the United States for annexation.

"So let's not let it happen." With Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque and his separatists publicly taking the position in their party rallies that separation is a matter to be decided simply by a vote, the prime minister has raised the key question:

By a vote of whom?

Not by Quebec alone, he has made it pretty clear.

Just what people in which sections of the country could share in such a referendum — if separation got that far — would have to be the first question asked and answered, the prime minister has made plain.

Which raises a second question — that of the vote in Quebec itself — as to whether English-speaking enclaves in the province such as Westmount and Notre Dame de Grace in Montreal, Pontiac in the western counties and Brome in the Eastern Townships could vote to secede from secession.

And a third question: what about those sections of Quebec which were no part of the province at the outset but were granted by the federal government after confederation?

Would these sections — huge tracts of the province's northern areas — be regarded as part of Quebec or as Canada?

With the prime minister officially having made debate on separation respectable, there can be no crying of "bigot" if some Canadian "terms" be set down.

Should Quebec separatists go for broke with a vote for "independence," then Canadians have a right to know, and the government and opposition have the immediate duty to inform all concerned of the position in dealing with the following areas and interests:

Control of the Seaway — is it conceivable that a separate Quebec could proclaim sovereignty over the St. Lawrence?

A land bridge to the Maritimes through Quebec linking Central and Atlantic Canada.

Air Canada.

The Trans-Canada Highway.

Other federal and Canadian-owned assets in Quebec.

Quebec's share of the national debt.

Federalists living in Quebec and separatists in other parts of Canada particularly Eastern and Northern Ontario.

Marc Lalonde Enters Political Bear Pit

By ERIC FORESTER from Ottawa

The vogue in this federal election seems to be for members of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau's personal staff to run for office as members of Parliament.

★ ★ ★

There's Romeo LeBlanc, former press secretary, seeking a parliamentary seat from New Brunswick; Gordon Gibson, former executive assistant, running in British Columbia; and Francis Fox, appointments secretary, running with Jacques Oliver, in two Quebec districts.

Then there's the biggest of them all, Marc Lalonde — power behind the prime minister for five years — now shedding his mantle of the grey eminence to enter the political bear pit.

Lalonde's case is the most interesting of all.

He's a 43-year-old economist-lawyer, who has perhaps the deepest understanding of any in this government about how the levers of power are operated. Lalonde held his first political job in the Conservative Diefenbaker government. He went back to Montreal where he taught and practised law before getting into politics again as the policy adviser to former prime minister Lester Pearson.

It was Lalonde, as Pearson's adviser, who picked Trudeau as the man to be the next prime minister. While other members of the Pearson cabinet embarked on a dog-fight for the party leadership, Lalonde set about his dual campaign to make Trudeau top dog.

★ ★ ★

He worked within the party to win support for Trudeau, while simultaneously trying to convince Trudeau himself to run for the job. On both counts, Lalonde was successful. Trudeau swept the 1968 leadership convention.

Lalonde became the principal adviser to Trudeau — and many claimed he is the driving force behind Trudeau policies to keep Quebec within the Confederation.

There is no subject of the domestic management of Canada upon which Marc Lalonde does not advise.

Above all, Lalonde is dedicated to keeping Quebec within Canadian Confederation, and to winning a rightful place of equality for French-speaking Canadians within the whole nation.

Now, as this current election campaign in Canada develops, it becomes likely that Trudeau will lose enough seats to reduce Liberal power to that of a minority government. If that happens, Trudeau is almost certain to resign and leave politics.

What then of Marc Lalonde and his view of what must be done to keep Quebec within Canada — and to make all Canada home for the Quebecer?

This is a man with a cold, logical mind, highly disciplined. This is also a shy man, who has said that if he were not a French-speaking Canadian he would never have entered politics. This is a man dedicated to an idea, not to any one man.

This, then, is Lalonde's reason for "going public" and enduring the publicity he dislikes. He is running in a district where his election is virtually certain. He will undoubtedly be a senior cabinet minister after the election.

And if Trudeau resigns? Well, Marc Lalonde will be there to make sure the idea of a fair shake for Quebec is still of paramount importance in the Canadian government.

Rung by Britain's Labor Party

An Alarm Bell for the Posh Schools

By PETER WILBY from London

The Headmasters of Britain's 200-plus elite independent schools for boys (the fee-paying "public" schools, as they are confusingly called) have held their annual meeting under a new threat to their future.

The Labor Party, in its recent "draft" program for Britain announced that its aim is to abolish fee-paying in schools and to bring all children of compulsory school age into the national education system."

The independent schools, attended by about seven per cent of the nation's children, are socially divisive, says the Labor Party. Their products obtain a quite disproportionate number of places in higher education, and mainly because of this, fill the seats of power and influence. A popular notion is that Britain's public boarding schools, where children learned self-reliance through an early parting from their parents, were invented to breed just such an elite to man positions of power and responsibility throughout the far-flung empire. If that were so the dissolution of the empire has taken away one justification for their existence.

But the atmosphere at the Headmasters' Conference was, nevertheless, one of seething anger — in some quarters, almost of hysteria. One headmaster talked of going to prison in defence of the public schools. "I shall carry on teaching until the police — or would it be the troops? — came to take me away," he proclaimed.

Another remarked: "Of course, we have heard Socialist talk of abolishing us before. There is a temptation to say 'rhubarb, rhubarb' and forget it. But I think we have to take this one seriously — any future Labor government is likely to be much more left-wing than past ones."

A few headmasters were discussing the possibilities of going into exile, if the axe fell. One thought that, with Britain going into the Common Market, it would be logical for the schools to operate from France or Germany. But this beguiling prospect of an Eton or a Harrow on the Rhine was discussed only in private. In the public sessions, the Headmasters' Conference eloquently reiterated the arguments for the survival of the independent schools.

The chairman, F. H. Shaw, headmaster of King's College School, pointed to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, which mentions freedom of parental choice in education. If a future Labor government abolished the public schools, it would leave Britain "aligned with the totalitarian regimes, alone among the free democratic countries of the world."

In Holland and Belgium, he said, a majority of pupils attend private schools. In France, one in four secondary school pupils is educated privately; in Germany, one in seven. In all these countries, the private sector receives state aid. "Formidable indeed must be the reasoned case which the Labor Party has prepared," said Mr. Shaw, "to justify the destruction of a freedom which the democratic societies not only of Europe but of America and the English-speaking nations so zealously guarantee to their citizens."

Several headmasters claimed that, by classing education as a commodity on which people must not spend their money, Labor would be putting it alongside drugs and pornography.

A more convincing point was made by Mr. Shaw: that a state monoply of educational provision, like most monopolies, would have "an in-built tendency to rigidity, to mediocrity, to disinclination for critical self-analysis, to complacency and bureaucratic self-satisfaction and ultimately an insensitivity in those who administer towards those who serve."

★ ★ ★

Mr. Shaw also told the conference that many critics of the public schools were ignorant of what went on in them and that this was the schools' own fault for being "somewhat unworldly and unrealistic in our reticence." The public schools are not what they were 40 or even 10 years ago. Caning of boys by boys has disappeared. Even masters use corporal punishment rarely. In one well-known Midlands school, for example, nine out of 12 housemasters have renounced it entirely.

★ ★ ★

And, at the Headmasters' Conference (though speakers still try to outdo each other in quotations from classical writers and philosophers and attacks on the permissiveness of modern society are almost obligatory), there is a new consciousness of the importance of presenting an up-to-date image. It is not so many years since journalists, admitted to the conference for the first time, had to sit behind a curtain, lest their vulgar presence distract the speakers. Now, they are treated with warmth and hospitality.

In a debate on "The Arts in Our School," several heads said that, while they should continue to encourage an enthusiasm for Bach and Mozart, young people's preference for folk singers like Bob Dylan and pop groups like the Velvet Underground should be respected. One head confessed his admiration for the Beatles.

Again and again, in conversations with journalists, headmasters stressed their willingness to give up to a quarter of the places in their schools to state-sponsored pupils from poor homes in "boarding need," as suggested by a royal commission four years ago. Such children would include those from broken homes, those whose parents worked abroad or had to move frequently and those living in intolerably bad housing conditions. And several public schools say they are prepared, as an emergency measure, to find a few places for the children of Ugandan Asian refugees.

Dyed in the Wool as It Were

By FRANK LOWE

It is quite probable that in the very near future you will no longer be as old as you feel. You will be as old as your wife wants you to be.

At least, that is how I read an advertisement recently put out by a major hair dye firm. The first part of the ad, addressed to the wife, goes like this:

"After all the time you spend trying to look younger than your age, your grey-haired husband is unintentionally telling people your age.

"Causing all that vanity to be in vain."

Thus having aroused the ire of every wife who has the misfortune to have a grey-haired husband, the ad then goes on to suggest a solution.

It is a new hair coloring for men.

The ad rhapsodizes:

"Wouldn't it be nice for you to look 5 or 10 years younger without even doing a thing to yourself? And wouldn't it be even nicer for your husband to look 5 or 10 years younger at the office?

So I guess it is goodbye to grey. Mind you, I have nothing against the company advertising this way — I mean, the company is motivated by nothing more sinister than good, old-fashioned greed.

But there are bound to be repercussions, if this catches on, the company perhaps did not consider. For instance, that husbandly compliment could turn into a boomerang.

You know what I am trying to say. Just before leaving for a party, the husband will look at his wife and say:

"I don't know how you do it, honey. Nobody would guess you were a day over 30."

Instead of being grateful for such an outright lie, the wife will now snarl:

"As long as I am with you they'll know I am over 30. Look at that hair — all grey and old. Why don't you become a red head?"

★ ★ ★

Or, heaven forbid, what happens if a husband goes through a dye job and emerges looking younger than his wife? The blood congeals at such a thought.

I have no personal feelings about this. My hair has not turned grey with the years. It now is a kind of tired red or non-enthused pink.

I might add that this fact irritates my wife more than somewhat. She thinks I am deliberately not turning grey simply to embarrass her.

So, as I said, my worries about the possible side-effects of this ad are purely altruistic. Even that part about how great it will be for the husband to look 5 to 10 years younger at the office has its dangers.

I once knew a feared and respected editor, so feared and respected even the office boys called him "sir." Then he dyed his head of distinguished grey hair.

The first day he appeared as a young-looking brown top, the senior office boy went up to him and invited him to join a game of allies.

There is also the point that the younger you look at work the less sympathy you get. After all, when a man looks 30 it is difficult to take him seriously when he complains about his arthritis.

Lack of Fish, Flooding Threaten Economic Disaster

Natural Phenomenon Hits Peru's Pocket

By JAMES NELSON GOODSELL, from Washington

A warm ocean current threatens economic disaster for Peru.

Flowing down the South Pacific coast, the warm waters of "El Nino," as the current is known, have sent millions of anchovies and other marine species scurrying in search of cooler waters. The anchovy has all but disappeared from Peruvian fishing waters, and this in turn has virtually shut down Peru's fishing industry.

For a nation that earns 40 per cent of its foreign exchange from fishing, the situation is one of mounting concern for Peruvians. It also could have major international repercussions, perhaps altering the world fish market which in recent years has come to accept Peru as the largest producer of fish products in the world.

In connection with the crisis, the Peruvian government has decreed an indefinite suspension of all fish-meal and fish-oil exports which began Oct. 1 — a step aimed at avoiding penalties for its failure to deliver on contracts for 400,000 metric tons of fish meal by the end of the year.

Coincidentally, the warm currents of "El Nino," which have replaced the cooler, nutrient-laden waters of the Humboldt Current, also are responsible for the worst flooding in Peruvian history. Food crops have been seriously damaged and Peru has been forced to import foodstuffs on a large scale.

Normally the Humboldt Current builds a wall of cold air along the Pacific coast of Peru that prevents warm-ocean rain clouds from discharging on the arid coast. Farms in the area normally are watered by a moist fog, and by streams trickling down from the Andes.

This year, however, there was no cold-air barrier and the Pacific rain clouds, which were fuller than usual, poured huge quantities of water on the ordinarily arid coast.

The result was flooding, particularly south of Lima, that virtually destroyed whole arms and small villages, leaving hundreds of thousands of people homeless.

With the destruction of crops, imports of foodstuffs, particularly vegetables, became necessary, and prices soared.

"El Nino" is not an unusual phenomenon. In the past, the current has come every five or six years, about Christmas-time. The name means "The Child."

Born off the coast of Ecuador, the current moves south to confront and override the strong, cold Humboldt Current that seeps up the west coast of South America from Antarctic regions. Ordinarily "El Nino" diminishes, and conditions return to normal in two or three months.

But this year, "El Nino" is still lingering off the coast.

After almost nine months of inactivity, concern is growing along the coast of Peru. The fishing industry remains idle and farm communities are trying to pick up the pieces from the damage done by flooding earlier in the year.

For fishing ports like Chimbote, north of the capital, there is fear that "El Nino" may have not only destroyed this year's fish harvest, but also permanently damaged the entire fishing industry.

Peruvians are beginning to wonder if their hard-won struggle to become the world's largest fish-product producer may have been destroyed as a result of the phenomenon which still shows no signs of going away.

Road Will Link Atlantic and Pacific

Boom Towns Stud Route Of New Amazon Highway

By LEONARD GREENWOOD, from Altamira, Brazil

Brazilian engineers are more than halfway across the world's greatest forest, the Amazon, building a road that will link the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

After six frustrating months waiting for tropical rains to stop, they are literally tearing their way ahead through some of the world's most difficult terrain.

To the east, and the Atlantic, lie 1,800 miles of completed road — half of it through matted jungle where until 18 months ago few white men had ever set foot. Now one can speed along the new road at up to 70 mph with the jungle pressing in on either side.

Ahead, to the far western frontier where the road will join a highway Peru is building to the Pacific, are another 1,700 miles of jungle which the Brazilians have vowed to conquer before the end of 1973.

By then, in only 21 working months, they will have finished an all-weather gravel road equalling the distance from New York to San Francisco and 500 miles into the Pacific.

Thousands of settlers are moving in to take up land along the highway in the greatest land rush since the opening of the North American West. Tiny towns have doubled or tripled their populations in two years.

Men who begged for work to feed their families two years ago are deluged with offers of jobs at eight to 10 times their old wages.

Girls who did not have a hope of marrying because all the young men had left to look for work in the big coastal cities now are marrying the doctors, engineers, technicians and skilled tradesmen drawn in by the boom.

Here in Altamira, where the population has soared from 6,000 to 14,000, there are so many single men that prostitutes pour into town and there are brawls and occasional gunfights over women in the raw frontier atmosphere.

★ ★ ★

The highway brought more people, more money and more shops and more goods in them. Two years ago there were 30 or 40 cars. Now there are 500. Buildings go up all over town and Altamira is getting its first multistorey blocks.

Newcomers bring not only money but ideas, new ways of living, clothing and ambitions that are catching on with many old residents.

Altamira was a sleepy town where adults went to bed early, young girls stayed at home and boys who remained here turned to drinking cachaca, a raw sugarcane spirit.

★ ★ ★

Now the girls, in their imported jeans and miniskirts, flirt with the newly arrived youths as they parade around the squares in the evenings. A discotheque blaring out music on a Japanese hi-fi system bought in the duty-free zone in Manaus is crowded even on week nights.

Development fever exceeds the wild days of the rubber boom at the turn of this century.

For nearly 500 years the Amazon has been a part of Brazil in name only. Isolated from the rest of the country by all but a long river and sea route, this giant territory — half the size of the United States — was forgotten and its neglected people lived lonely lives.

★ ★ ★

Now, in a dramatic bid to open the region and link it with the rest of Brazil, the government is spending $90 million on the Transamazonica highway. Millions more are going on educational facilities, improving agriculture and implanting rudimentary health measures.

★ ★ ★

More than 500,000 settlers will be brought into the forest in government schemes to colonize the land. The first 1,300 families, who arrived last year, are harvesting their first crops. Another 8,000 families will arrive this year.

Elsewhere in Brazil, critics say this money would bring bigger and quicker returns invested in southern industry. But here, where the forgotten Brazilians are getting their first taste of progress, there is natually only praise.

Altamira, where the Transamazonica was inaugurated and which is the centre of the colonization, shows the most dramatic impact. But Estreita and Maraba, east of here, grow rapidly.

Now the highway has reached Itaituba, 400 miles to the west and it, too, is mushrooming. Next it will be the turn of Jacareacanga and Humaita.

★ ★ ★

The Transamazonica is part of a $450-million national integration plan to link the drought-stricken northeast, where a third of Brazil's 100 million people are crowded in poverty, with the vast emptiness of the Amazon where there is land and endless fresh-water.

Another highway, from Cuiaba to Santarem, will cut the Amazon from north to south, giving the heart of the Amazon its first road link with southern Brazil.

Southeast Asians Fear China

Ping-Pong Diplomacy Threat to Neutrality

By DENIS WARNER

Southeast Asia has been testing the breeze from China for far too long to be beguiled by the euphoria generated elsewhere by ping-pong diplomacy.

After all, nearly 18 years have passed since Prime Minister Chou En-lai proclaimed the doctrine of peaceful co-existence at the Afro-Asia conference at Bandung and launched what many of his listeners hoped would become a new era of peace and amity.

Instead, Southeast Asia found itself plunged into even more violence than it had known in its recent past.

Many factors were involved in the upsurge of violence, but among them were the instigating forces of Chinese chauvinism and Chinese communism. Peking became the self-proclaimed great rear for the North Vietnamese when they again resorted to war in Vietnam and then spread it to embrace all of Indochina.

It lauded Sukarno when he set out to crush Malaysia. It provided open encouragement and at least psychological support for the new wars of "national liberation" in Malaysia, Thailand and the Philippines.

★ ★ ★

Surviving communist leaders fled from Indonesia to Peking after the abortive 1965 coup brought about the collapse of the party, the Malaysian "confrontation," the Peking-Jakarta axis and Sukarno himself. Thai communists also found sanctuary in China and radio stations to spread the doctrine of communist insurgency in their native land.

Chinese People's Liberation Army engineers, under a heavy screen of anti-aircraft guns, began their road building south through Laos towards the Mekong River and the Thai border. Ping-pong games notwithstanding, the road continues to edge its ominous way south.

Mao may be seen to beam benignly to viewers in the West and to have a magnetic lure for the Japanese. But westerners are distant from the scene and the Japanese are strong enough to stand on their own feet. The Southeast Asians are neither distant from China nor strong.

Foreign ministers publicly pay lip service to the idea of normalizing relations with China: Privately, they say they are in no hurry. Similiarly, though they may deplore, on humanitarian grounds, the continued horror of the Vietnam war, their hopes for a settlement ride on a solution that does not leave Hanoi master of the Indochina peninsula.

What sort of peace, indeed whether there is likely to be any peace at all in Southeast Asia, depends essentially on this. If no one talks about the domino theory these days, there is general acceptance that an outright communist victory in Indochina would give an immense boost to the insurgent groups at work in Malaysia, Thailand and the Philippines.

It would also make available vast quantities of arms and ammunition. Guns left over from the Second World War armed the communist insurgents in the late 1940s: Literally millions of weapons could become available now.

This is not to suggest that Southeast Asia has again become mired in pessimism. Though Singapore and Bangkok are far from sanguine in their appreciation of the Indochina situation, the Indonesians, who have been watching it with the greatest of care, believe that General Giap's Easter offensive was both a military and a psychological disaster for Hanoi.

"If the tanks had rolled through and all Vietnam had fallen in the first month, Giap would have won," an Indonesian cabinet minister told me. "But when he failed to do this there wasn't a South Vietnamese, a Cambodian or a Laotian who did not understand that North Vietnam was the aggressor."

"By showing their hand in this way, the North Vietnamese have created an entirely different, and much more difficult, war for themselves."

He believes that Hanoi has only two courses open to it now: to negotiate under circumstances which are much less favorable to its cause than they were before the beginning of the Easter offensive, or to settle on a protracted guerrilla war which may go on for years.

If this conclusion seems excessively optimistic to some other members of the now much more active Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), it has been responsible for some healthy, if unsuccessful, efforts to find a way of bringing the Indochina war to an end and to much longer-term thought about the future of a neutral Southeast Asia.

The emphasis is much more on "neutral" than "neutralized," since the latter is seen to imply great power guarantees, and even great power presence. But first the war must be brought to an end. Then the Americans will have to go from Thailand and Indochina.

As the Southeast Asians appreciate, however, neither the successful conclusion of the war — ie. a genuine compromise — nor the final withdrawal of the Americans contains any assurances that other powers, notably China and the Soviet Union, will not find it expedient to attempt to establish their own spheres of influence.

If the Indochina war has succeeded in nothing else, it has most certainly bought time for the rest of Southeast Asia. Some of it has been well spent. Indochina, which was so close to bankruptcy and communist rule less than a decade ago, has made remarkable progress under the leadership of President Suharto. Jakarta used to be one of the world's most depressing capitals, hot ,sullen, lifeless, and dirty.

Today it almost sparkles. Nothing will change the heat, but the atmosphere is vigorous and active. Foreign investments are flowing in and exports, even more importantly, are flowing out, and the city, in comparison with anything it has known in the past, is flourishing.

Jakarta does not reflect all Indonesia and the truly horrendous problems of overpopulation, undereducation and poverty still have to be tackled, but the signs are more hopeful than they have ever been before.

"I wouldn't give it better than a 50-50 chance of making a go of it," said one economist with years of experience in Indonesia. "But, then, 10 years ago I wouldn't have given it any chance at all."

★ ★ ★

Singapore has a dynamism all of its own, perhaps too much for its own good, for it runs the risk of becoming a centre of envy. Malaysia has eased its communal nightmares, and Thailand's economic problems have proved less serious than it had once feared.

There are insurgency troubles on the Malaysia border, in northern and northeastern Thailand and in Sarawak, but all are slow moving, serious perhaps, but far from critical — provided that they do get a sudden increase in material (or psychological) aid from outside.

Hoping to profit from Southeast Asians' deep desire to be left alone to work out their problems in peace, the Soviet Union has renewed its call for an Asian collective security agreement. Though the Russians have not put a foot wrong in Southeast Asio since the collapse of the Sukarno regime in Indonesia in 1965, the call has once again fallen on barren ground.

★ ★ ★

Anything that strengthens the Russians' position must only encourage the Chinese to strengthen theirs. It is with this new situation that Southeast Asia must somehow try to cope: To play ping-pong without becoming the shuttlecock and to be friendly with the Soviets without playing Russian roulette.

THE FIAT 128 FOUR-DOOR SEDAN BRINGS YOU GOOD NEWS FOR YOUR KNEES.

The trouble with most small sedans is that while they help solve the serious problems of space on the road, they create serious problems of space inside the car.

One of the most remarkable things about the front-wheel drive Fiat 128 you see pictured above is that, while on the outside it's 10 inches shorter than the Volkswagen Beetle, on the inside it borders on the cavernous.

For example, in the front, you get the exact same headroom you get in the slightly more expensive Cadillac DeVille, more hip room than a Toyota Corona or a Dodge Colt, and the same leg room as a Chrysler Newport.

And in the back, where small cars are really small, you get 2 inches more knee room than the Volkswagen Beetle, 10 inches more hip room than a Chevy Vega, ½ inch more headroom than a Lincoln Continental, and more room to get in and out of the back door than any four-door sedan we know of.

All of which is one of the big reasons why, in Europe, where the average family averages more people than in Canada, they buy more Fiats than any other car.

$200,000 Prize For Drug Facts

Colonist-Newsday Service

PARIS — The U.S. government is now offering up to $200,000 in secret reward money to informants who provide information leading to the seizure of clandestine heroin laboratories in France.

Although U.S. officials in Paris declined to comment on the new cash-award program, reports on it have been percolating through the French underworld for the past two months. According to these reports, the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, which maintains its European headquarters here, has quietly told its network of informers that they can earn up to $200,000 for information on a major heroin laboratory.

A major problem confronting U.S. drug fighters in France, however, has been how to communicate the reward offers to potential informers without ruffling the feelings of the French government.

Jobs with Grits No Incentive For Unemployed

Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If Manpower Minister Bryce Mackasey still has any lingering doubts that often, unemployment insurance is a disincentive to work, he should consult the people in the Ottawa West Liberal campaign headquarters.

Prime Minister Trudeau recently personally opened these headquarters on Richmond in West Ottawa out of which two-term Liberal MP Lloyd Francis is running for re-election.

If Mackasey drops by and enquires how things are going, he is liable to be told they need 30 workers for election day — and can't get them.

Not even for something better than $25 for the day.

The answer to people at Francis' headquarters are getting is pretty much the same — it just isn't worth the effort of working for the day, even at $25-plus "because it would only come off our unemployment insurance."

One woman worker they tried to recruit told them simply that "it wouldn't be worth my while to bother putting on my girdle."

So on election day, the way things shape up now, the Francis campaign organization is going to have to depend pretty well exclusively on volunteer workers.

Socreds Reject Coalition

LA POCATIERE, Que. (CP) — Real Couette, Social Credit leader, said Tuesday there is no question of an alliance between the Progressive Conservative party and the Social Credits.

He also said there is little chance his organization would form a coalition with the Tories if the latter formed a minority government after the Oct. 30 federal election.

Couette was commenting on remarks made by Robert Thompson, Conservative candidate in the British Columbia riding of Surrey-White Rock and former leader of the Social Credit party.

Thompson suggested the Conservatives would consider a coalition with the Socreds if they formed a minority government.

Candidate In Jail During Vote

TORONTO (CP) — A woman who filed papers as a Communist candidate in the Oct. 30 federal election in the constituency of Halifax-East Hants is serving a nine-month sentence in the Don Jail here.

Barbara Biley was listed as a candidate when nominations closed Tuesday.

She was convicted of obstructing police Dec. 17, 1970. She made two appeals against the conviction, but abandoned the second one in June.

Police Work Dismounted

SURREY (CP) — RCMP foot patrols begun Friday and Saturday nights in the Cloverdale and Whalley areas last month after complaints about vandalism, appear to be working out well, Inspector James Riddell said Friday. He said the improvement was particularly evident in the last two weeks.

Davis Wants Tory Crown--Liberal

Leader in Wings?

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon predicted Tuesday that Premier William Davis will seek the leadership of the federal Progressive Conservative party within three years if the Conservatives don't make a creditable showing in the federal election Oct .30.

Nixon said Davis's weekend decision to campaign nationally for Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield indicates that the Ontario premier wants Stanfield's job.

Nixon said George Drew was the last Ontario Tory leader to "take an active role" in a federal election campaign on behalf of the national party.

"It is interesting to note that Drew became federal leader two years later, so that his federal assistance became a good way to move on to the national leadership of his party," Nixon said.

"The parallel at the present time is striking. If Bob Stanfield doesn't win this time — and only the blindly committed believe he will — then the federal Tories are looking for a new leader. If history teaches us anything, then we can predict Bill Davis moving to the federal leadership of the Conservative party within three years."

Davis announced on the weekend that he has cancelled his appointments to campaign for Stanfield full-time.

Trudeau Claims Plea Swayed Reds

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says his intervention has allowed hundreds of persons to leave the Soviet Union.

Trudeau in a telegram to a torchlight parade of Metropolitan Toronto Jews Monday, said the Canadian government will continue to try to persuade Russia to allow its minority groups to emigrate freely.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp read the prime minister's message to more than 600 persons who marched in the city to rally support for Soviet Jewry.

Trudeau said he was the first Canadian prime minister to travel to the Soviet Union.

"I emphasized to Premier Alexei Kosygin that warm relations between our countries rested to a significant degree on the belief by Canadians that Soviet minority groups were accorded the rights stated in the United Nations universal declaration of human rights," said Trudeau.

He said the Soviet government has shown a clear willingness "to permit the exodus from that country of Soviet citizens" since his visit.

London Life presents

The Human Journey

Don't miss this award-winning series of TV specials on the CTV Network.

The Human Journey series provides a searching look at ourselves. It is produced by the CTV Network for the London Life Insurance Company. Here is a brief review of programs for the 1972-73 season.

Please check your local television listings for exact time and channel. Dates below are subject to change. In certain non-CTV covered areas these programs will be shown on independent stations at a later date.

The family — Oct. 15
Fewer children and the physical separation of members of a family have caused great changes in the family unit during the last few decades. The result: new and extreme pressures on marriages and individuals. This provocative program examines the many changes that have taken place in the family unit in an attempt to isolate the keys to a happy family life.

Where we live — Nov. 12
Most of us live in cities, and most urban areas have housing problems. There are no easy solutions, but this documentary looks at old and new ideas on the controversial subject of where Canadians live. You will see an unusual approach to increasing population density in the heart of a city, without sacrificing what most of us want in a place to live.

How we adapt — Jan. 28
What makes you tick? Things like being in good shape and eating nutritional foods are obviously important factors. So is mental health. But none of these is sufficient by itself. The human body is a fascinating and complex mechanism. This documentary reveals new research on how to keep all parts and functions of the body working together. Watch it and learn more about yourself.

The learning process — Mar. 4
The capacity to learn is highest just after birth and goes down slowly and steadily from then on. The ability to learn, however, rises. This program explores the whole process of thought and learning. It looks at the many ways we communicate ideas and thoughts and delves into the important subject of motivating both children and adults to learn.

The job — May 6
Not only are attitudes toward work changing, but the very nature of work is undergoing a change, too. The program asks some disturbing questions, such as: with improved technology making work easier, why are so many people dissatisfied with their jobs? Some surprising facts are revealed in interviews with experts in job motivation and behaviour.

Film Men Voting

Tentative agreement has been reached in a contract dispute that threatened to close down the majority of B.C.'s movie theatres.

The situation now rests with some 160 projectionists, who will begin voting at Vancouver Wednesday night on a proposed settlement. Projectionists in other parts of the province will vote later, although the size of the Vancouver membership of the union involved will probably dictate the outcome.

The projectionists are members of Local 348 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators.

A. E. McManus, local president, said Tuesday that union negotiators were recommending acceptance of the proposed package.

Terms of the package are not being disclosed in advance of the meeting. The union has been seeking a three-year agreement to replace one of the same duration which expired June 30. Involved are 70 theatres operated by two chains — Odeon and Famous Players. These include the majority of movie theatres in B.C.

While McManus wasn't prepared to comment on the situation, it was learned the projectionists had been close to taking strike action, particularly in recent days. It would have been the first strike by projectionists in B.C. in 35 years.

The only movie theatres in the Victoria area not involved in the dispute ar the Fox Cinema, Oak Bay Theatre and Gem Theatre at Sidney.

Sleeping Beauty

On a warm, sunny Thanksgiving weekend Sunday, what could be more pleasant than relaxing by Goodacre Lake in Victoria's Beacon Hill Park? And what could be more pleasant than Angela McMaster relaxing? Angela, who came to Canada six months ago from London, England, lives in Vancouver but found the lure of Victoria too strong to resist over the weekend.

Ex-Editor Dies

Graves

A former editor of The Daily Colonist, H. Sandham Graves, 78, died Tuesday after a lengthy illness.

Graves was editor of the Colonist for 17 years, from 1943 to 1960, when he retired, his editorship capping a career of 41 years in journalism.

He joined the staff of the Colonist when he returned from fighting overseas in France, Belgium and Palestine in the First World War in 1919. He joined the Victoria Times in 1921 and worked there for 10 years for the late B.C. Nicholas, then editor.

In 1929, he went as a reporter to the B.C. legislative press gallery, and in 1931 he rejoined the Colonist staff, this time as its legislative reporter.

He remained in the press gallery until 1942, and at one time served as its president.

In 1942 he retired from the gallery when he was promoted to acting editor of the Colonist. A year later he succeeded the late C. R. C. Swayne as editor-in-chief.

When he retired in July, 1960, he was succeeded by the Colonist's current editor-in-chief and publisher, Richard Bower.

During the Second World War, Graves wrote a book which was an eyewitness account of the 1914-18 war and which won widespread acclaim and was placed in all B.C. school libraries. One reviewer described the book, Lost Diary, as "a reporter's account of what he remembers of the fighting and suffering, the blood and the noise and the horror of great land battles fought in France by Canadians of another generation."

Graves was born in Dublin, Ireland, in 1894 and came to Canada in the early 1900s.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Howard Barnett (Shelagh) of Victoria; two sisters, Mrs. G. E. Austin, Anaheim, Calif. and Mrs. C. J. Walsh, Monterey, Calif.; two grandchildren, Robert and Deborah, both of Victoria. His wife, Jessie, died in 1944.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete, but will be private. McCall Bros. are in charge of arrangements.

Manager Sent to Jail

Breach of trust is the most important consideration when it comes to sentence for an official who has robbed or committed some other offence against his firm, Judge William Ostler said Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court.

With that in mind he sentenced Esquimalt resident John Alexander Duvall, 19, of 1220 Rockcrest, to three months in jail to be followed by a one-year probationary term.

Duvall pleaded guilty Sept. 15 to a Colwood RCMP charge of taking about $1,359 about Aug. 26 from a service station he managed at 1651 Island Highway in the Colwood area. The money represented two days' receipts and only Duvall had the combination to the safe it was in.

He was picked up in Saskatoon about three days later with $700 of the money, and defence lawyer Robert Edwards said Tuesday that this had been returned to the firm.

Edwards also said Duvall turned himself in to police at Saskatoon and described Duvall's only previous conviction as a prank. He said Duvall had been in jail 1½ months awaiting hearings and sentence and asked for probation for his client — but no more time.

Ostler replied that Duvall's previous good character time in custody, surrender and return of the $700 helped, but added that higher courts in B.C. had "consistently" stated the main element in such cases was breach of trust.

We took care of the bugs that nature forgot. So wool, nature's miracle fibre is more miraculous than you ever thought possible.

Real bugs. Wool doesn't suit their tastes. Some insects used to call wool home. But not today. Wool carpets are thoroughly moth-proofed. Permanently moth-proofed. So no bug will get snug in a wool rug. Ever.

Electric bugs. Wool resists static build-up because it absorbs water vapour from the air. And low static electricity means that a wool carpet doesn't attract floating dirt and dust.

Fire bugs. No need for alarm with wool carpets. Unlike most synthetics, wool won't burn easily. And it won't melt or bubble, leaving an ugly plastic crust. Because wool holds water vapour. And because it's a protein, and proteins don't burn easily. Burning matches and cigarettes just smoulder and die. Char marks can be rubbed off with a coin, for example. Your carpet is left practically unblemished. As are your relations with your clumsier friends.

Stain bugs. Even though wool absorbs water vapour, it repels liquid water. Because a protective membrane covering each wool fibre makes it hard for liquids to penetrate. It prevents spills from soaking in before you can reach them. And almost any stain can be removed from a wool carpet if you treat it promptly and properly.

Litter bugs. Wool keeps dirt at a distance. Its fibres are armoured with scales that hold dirt high in the pile, and keep it from penetrating deep. So dirt doesn't have a chance to wear away at the base of the pile. And it doesn't have a place to hide from your vacuum cleaner. What's more, wool's fibres don't reflect or reveal dirt. Because they're opaque, not transparent like most synthetic fibres.

Look Baaaaaaa . . . no bugs. The Woolmark is your assurance of worry-free carpeting. Because wool carpets have all the bugs ironed out. That makes wool a wise investment. And if you want to investigate before you invest, go ahead. Pure Wool Pile's got nothing to hide.

There are no bugs in Woolmark carpets

Colour bugs. Wool accepts the widest range of dyes. So any room anywhere can be tastefully carpeted in wool. And wool's absorption powers mean that dyes penetrate right into the warm little hearts of the fibres. That's why wool carpeting boasts colours with depth. Colours that are rich and vibrant, and stay that way a long, long time.

Squash bugs. Wool is non-flattening. Whether it's under furniture feet or just people's feet, wool is a natural spring that bounces back. And that means carpets that stay thick and bulky when the other kind are looking depressed. Carpets that look better, longer.

Melville Island

Panarctic Hits More Gas

OTTAWA (CP) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien announced Tuesday that Panarctic Oils Ltd. has found gas again on Melville Island in the Arctic, calling it a "very, very encouraging sign" of a major gas field in the region.

He told a quickly-called press conference that the latest well doubles the estimates of gas reserves in the area, to 5 trillion cubic feet.

It brings estimated reserves of the Arctic Islands to about 15 trillion cubic feet, closer to the 25 trillion needed to pay for a gas pipeline to eastern Canada.

Panarctic is 45-per-cent owned by the government, with 19 oil companies owning the other 55 per cent.

Chretien said the new well is especially important because it is 11 miles from another Panarctic well, indicating "a really huge field." Another well, six miles from the first, also hit gas.

Two other fields have been located north of Melville Island, at Kristoffer Bay and King Christian.

But Chretien could offer no prediction when total reserves could be found to add up to the total needed to justify a 4,000-mile pipeline to Toronto or Montreal, and the eastern United States.

Panarctic has been drilling in the North for three years.

It shares the latest well with Tenneco Oil and Minerals Ltd. Its other sites are also joint ventures with private oil consortiums.

The new well is on the shore of Melville but Chretien said no permits have yet been granted for offshore drilling because of the threat of pollution.

Chretien said no oil has been found beneath the gas on Melville Island. Panarctic has already struck oil on Ellesmere Island.

The petroleum industry, including Panarctic, is to pursue its exploration this winter in a program estimated to cost $200 million.

New President Willing

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

What can the Investment Dealers Association do for British Columbia? That was the question and the main theme of a visit Tuesday morning by the association's new full-time president Andrew Kniewasser of Toronto when he called on the province's new attorney-general, Alex Macdonald.

Kniewasser wasn't just paying lip service to a new government — he indicated strongly in a later interview that he has some definite plans in mind to increase public participation in developing the economy of the provinces and the country as a whole.

The former manager of Expo 67, appointed by the investment dealers just last June 1, said in the interview that Canadians have a major role to play in the equity market.

"Investment, by Canadians, is the best way to develop this country," he said.

Kniewasser was hired by the investment men from the federal civil service. His most recent posting was senior assistant deputy minister (industry and trade development) in the department of industry, trade and commerce.

"As a career civil servant," he said, "it was obvious to me where our investment capital should come from."

And, while he is forming plans for a stronger IDA, Kniewasser sees nothing weak about a system of provincial securities commissions overseeing the securities industries in Canada.

"We've got one of the best systems in the world," he declared. "For instance, it takes very few days to clear a prospectus across Canada where this wouldn't necessarily be the case under a federal administration."

During his B.C. visit, Kniewasser is taking steps to re-establish a fulltime provincial manager and strengthen the operation of the Vancouver office.

While he's talking to the managers of the various investment firms here and in Vancouver, the IDA chief is making it plain that he wants to talk more with employees of these firms and "find out how the young people are thinking."

"And, I might add," he said "I'm getting some good answers. Investment is a challenging job for the well-trained young person."

Chile

Copper Sales Grabbed

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — President Salvador Allende announced Monday night he is assuming personal control over sales of Chilean copper to thwart future "aggression of imperialist monopolies."

Allende spoke to a rally called by the communist-controlled Central Workers Confederation. He said his move was a "just and legitimate" response to the court embargo last week in France of $1.4 million intended as payment for a shipment of 1,250 tons of Chilean copper ordered by French manufacturers.

The embargo was obtained by the Kennecott Copper Corp., one of three American companies whose interests in Chilean copper mines were nationalized by the leftist government last year without compensation.

Copper sales account for 83 per cent of Chile's foreign revenue.

Copper sales have been handled by the Corporation del Cobre, CODELCO, a government-owned corporation that is semi-autonomous.

Allende said, however, that he plans to issue a decree establishing a government copier-sales organization that will be directly responsible to the president.

Charter Flights

U.K. Planning Fares Slash

LONDON (AP) — The Civil Aviation Authority of Britain announced Tuesday plans to slash transatlantic charter flight fares and restore order to the charter business that brought a chaotic rash of strandings around the world in the last two years.

The scheme, scheduled to be introduced April 1 after a trial run, could mean round-trip fares from London to New York of $120 to $216.

The cheapest round trip fares on scheduled airlines now operating across the Atlantic range between $200 and $240. Cut-price charter tickets can cost as little as $96 for one-way flights.

Authority chairman Lord Boyd-Carpenter said the new scheme, designed to streamline charter business, will go into operation if ratified by international aviation organizations meeting in Ottawa next Monday.

He invited British Airlines and tour operators to apply for licences to operate the advance-booking charters on intercontinental routes.

Bids poured in almost immediately with dramatically slashed fares thot could mean a charter bonanza next year. The London-based CPS Aviation and Travel Group said it will introduce two-way trans-Atlantic fares of $108 to New York and Toronto and $156 to Los Angeles and Vancouver.

The British Overseas Airways Corp. said it would offer an off-season fare of $144.

Boyd-Carpenter said the fares will be fixed by tour operators working with airlines, who will be permitted to sell blocks of seats only to licensed agencies. This will impose tighter control of charter flights.

GNP Leap Seen

LONDON (CP) — T. A. Boyles, chairman of the Bank of Nova Scotia, estimates that Canada's gross national product, the total value of goods and services produced, will rise 10½ to 11 per cent this year. This would be one of the largest increases since the mid-1960s.

Production has been increasing since early 1971 at well above the growth in the country's productive potential and this trend, he said, "now seems likely to persist through much if not all of next year."

Boyles issued a brief statement Tuesday after presiding at the bank's first board of directors meeting held in London.

Pineapple Flight Longest

EDMONTON (CP) — A Wardair Ltd. aircraft established a world distance record Sunday by carrying a load of pineapple from Hawaii to an orphange in England.

A company spokesman said the Boeing 707 set the record for the longest non-stop flight by a domestic or charter airline by flying from Honolulu to Gatwick Airport in England, a distance of 7,760 miles.

The previous record, 7,540 miles, was set earlier this year by a British aircraft on a flight to Baghdad from Seattle.

The pineapples are for the Yarborough children's orphanage at Sussex.

Wardair is an Edmonton-based charter airline.

Freshwater Catches Improve as Weather Cools

Freshwater fishing is starting to improve in Island lakes and streams as the weather cools.

Spencer Marr, Cusheon Lake Resort, Ganges, reports that the cutthroat fishing is ranging from 1.12-pounds down. Many are caught that are not shown in the King Fisherman lists as the fish do not reach a pound in weight. The favorite lure is the worm with fly fishing and Flatfish also popular.

The Chinook Club will hold its first Frostbite Derby of the season in the Saanich Inlet on Sunday from dawn to 2 p.m.

ALLAN McKINNON SAYS:

It is a foolish man who says that Canada can be economically independent. No nation on the globe can be. In organized society every nation on earth is dependent to varying degrees upon other nations. But this does not mean that Canada, nor any nation, should prmit itself to be bought out by some other nation. When a majority of our economic decisions cease to be made in Canada, we will have lost not only our economic but our political integrity and our independence.

ELECT ALLAN McKINNON

And help keep Canada FREE from Foreign Political and Eeconomic Domination!

There are other calculators under $100 but none we know of with all the features of the

DIGI-matic 8

99.98

For under $100 we know of no other portable calculator that will give you office machine accuracy and convenience away from the office. The DIGI-MATIC 8 is the kind of personal-size calculator you've been waiting for. Fast, accurate, durable, attractive, the DIGI-MATIC 8 adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides and does mixed calculations anytime, anywhere. Instantly. Without any excuses. Here's why:

Floating decimal
Some portable calculators have a fixed decimal. This leads to small errors when you multiply or divide using a few decimal places, gross errors when working with many decimal places. The DIGI-MATIC 8 has a floating decimal. Which means it doesn't round figures off to one or two decimals. The decimal point goes where it has to go to give you the correct answer.

Constant key
Special constant key permits continuous multiplication or division.

CE key
Say you're working to a final total through a long set of calculations. And you make a mistake on the last entry. The CE key allows you to clear the wrong entry and put in the correct one. There's no need to start all over from the beginning.

Portable power counts

PROVINCIAL COURT

A defence lawyer asked Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court that his 15-year-old client not be sent to Wilkinson Road provincial jail in Saanich to await sentence because "there's some question of violence out there."

Lawyer Robert Johnston did not elaborate on the remark except to say his information came from the client, a juvenile boy who pleaded guilty to a Sidney RCMP charge of break-in and theft after being raised last Friday to adult court from juvenile court.

The charge followed a break-in early Sept. 21 at the Metro Toyota building in Sidney where keys to all the cars were stolen and several cars were driven away.

Judge William Ostler remanded the case to Friday for sentence and Johnston asked that the boy, whose name cannot be published, be held in the Victoria city jail instead of Wilkinson Road. The judge said he had no powers to order such a move and suggested Johnston take it up with "local authorities."

□

A total jail term of three months followed by nine months' probation was ordered by Ostler for Elizabeth Gladys Frenchie, 18, of 643 John, who pleaded guilty Sept. 19 to a two-count Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200.

The charge resulted from the shoplifting Sept. 18 of 65 cents worth of gum from the Safeway store at 2635 Quadra and a $4 watch strap from Simpsons-Sears.

Ostler noted the thefts meant Miss Frenchie had forfeited parole following convictions Sept. 30, 1971, for theft under $50 and last Feb. 2 for escaping custody.

Four months in jail was the total term set by Ostler for Raymond Frederick Baker, 22, no fixed address, who pleaded guilty to four charges containing six counts of false pretences and two of obtaining lodgings by fraud.

The charges resulted from worthless cheques cashed in September, in Victoria and Vancouver, for a total of $193.59 worth of furniture, merchandise and money. Ostler noted Baker had been convicted last March in Ontario on five bad-cheque counts but had left the province before sentencing day.

□

James Leslie Evans, 20, of 235 Langford, was fined $350 and put on prabation for six months after pleading guilty Sept. 18 to a charge of possession of a narcotic in Victoria — a small amount of hashish found when police stopped him Sept. 17. Prosecutor Rod Taylor said Evans was fined $300 on a similar charge June 16, 1970.

□

Walter Douglas Hunter, 27, of Vancouver, received a suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term following his plea of guilty to a charge of possession of a narcotic in Victoria — a baggie of marijuana found when police checked him early Sunday on a downtown street.

□

In traffic court, Judge Harold Alder imposed fines of $350 each against three persons in separate cases of impaired driving.

They were James Leonard Donaldson, 18, of Terrace, stopped Sunday in Victoria, who pleaded guilty; William Rene Lafferty, 29, of 1844 Island Highway, stopped July 21 in Saanich, who pleaded guilty, and Arthur Edward Davies, 24, of 611 Mary, found guilty after a trial and stopped April 23 in Saanich.

Cabinet Cuts Alliance Jobs

The NDP government has taken cabinet action to close down the Provincial Alliance of Businessmen, as it promised it would.

The job-seeking alliance was set up by the former Social Credit government and was known to be a pride of then rehabilitation minister Phil Gaglardi.

In a cabinet order released Tuesday, the present government cut 26 jobs in the Alliance administration. The jobs — 11 employment counsellors, two case aides, two clerks, eight clerk-stenographers and three clerk-typists — will end Oct. 31.

Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi said before cabinet met Tuesday that employees of the PAB had not been led to believe they all would get employment elsewhere in the government.

He was answering questions from newsmen on reports of dissatisfaction among Alliance employees on the mainland who couldn't find alternative work.

Levi said one or two employees had already left, and jobs were being found for some of the others.

It was also reported that some PAB offices would be closing before Oct. 31.

South Fights Way Back

SAIGON (UPI) — South Vietnamese troops battled their way back into a third overrun hamlet within 20 miles of Saigon but the communists clung to 13 other towns less than a day's march from the capital, field reports said Tuesday.

An American adviser said one of the communist-held hamlets was barely 13 miles from Saigon and all were within 25 miles of the city, but allied commanders discounted the possibility that the communists could fight their way into the capital.

Contract Let For Breakwater

A $179,835 federal contract for breakwater extension at Oak Bay Marina has been awarded to Pacific Piledriving Co. Ltd., Public Works Minister J. E. Dube announced Tuesday.

Under the contract, the present 500-foot breakwater will be extended by 75 feet, and a new 350-foot breakwater will be built. Some 14,500 cubic yards of quarried rock and armor and 15,000 cubic yards of core rock will be needed for the project.

The work is being undertaken to provide protection for Oak Bay Marina under federal public works department marina policy.

Oak Bay Marina operator Bob Wright said the marina policy was adopted by the Pearson government.

It provides for construction of breakwaters to protect marinas as long as the cost of the work does not exceed the value of the marina itself.

He said it could only be done for marinas open for public use, not for private clubs, and that it was partially a make-work policy.

Wright said the marina itself is also expanding, and is currently building wharfage for 123 additional boats.

Plans and specifications for the breakwater were prepared by the public works department, and Pacific Piledriving submitted the lowest of three bids for the job, expected to take six months.

Sharp Pitching Keeps Tigers and Reds Alive

Brilliant pitching by Joe Coleman of Detroit Tigers and Ross Grimsley of Cincinnati Reds Tuesday extended the major league baseball playoffs.

Coleman set a playoff record, striking out 14 Oakland batters, as he kept Detroit hopes alive in the American League series with a seven-hit, 3-0 decision.

Fourth game of the series will be played today in Detroit with Oakland, 3-2 and 5-0 winners in the first two games, still needing only one win to earn a world series berth. Fifth game, if necessary, will be in Detroit Thursday.

The Tigers will start Mickey Lolich against Jim "Catfish" Hunter. Lolich was the first-game loser in 11 innings while Rollie Fingers, who came on in relief, drew the win.

Grimsley struck out only five Pittsburgh batters but he held the Pirates to just two hits in a 7-1 victory which forced a deciding game in the National League playoff.

That game will be played today in Cincinnati with first-game starters, Steve Blass of the Pirates and Don Gullett of the Reds, slated for a rematch. Blass gained a 5-1 decision in the opener.

Coleman, a righthander, and Ken Holtzman worked through three scoreless innings before the Tigers took advantage of a wild streak by the Oakland lefthander to score a pair of runs in the fourth inning.

Al Kaline, who ran his consecutive-game hitting streak to 14, started the rally with a one-out walk. Bill Freehan, starting his first game since Sept. 21 when he suffered a broken thumb, followed with a double, sending Kaline to third base. Holtzman walked Willie Horton to load the bases and then after Mickey Stanley had flied out to short centrefield, Ike Brown drilled a single up the middle to score Kaline and Freehan.

Freehan completed the scoring with an eighth-inning home run.

Coleman, who had retired the Athletics on strikes in the first inning after yielding a double to Matty Alou and walk to Dal Maxvill, finished with a flourish, striking out the last two batters. His strikeout total topped the record of 12 set by Baltimore's Jim Palmer on Oct. 5, 1970 against Minnesota.

The Athletics were playing without shortstop Bert Campaneris who was suspended for the balance of the series and fined $500 for a bat-throwing incident during Oakland's 5-0 victory on Sunday.

Campaneris threw his bat at relief pitcher Lerrin LaGrow after being hit on the ankle by a pitched ball. The incident emptied both benches and Detroit manager Billy Martin had to be restrained by three umpires.

When things calmed down both Campaneris and LaGrow were ejected from the game.

Before being hit Campaneris had collected three hits, stolen two bases and scored twice as the Athletics scored once in the first inning and erupted for four more runs in the fifth.

John "Blue Moon" Odom stopped the Tigers on three hits while Woody Fryman, the first of five Detroit pitchers took the loss.

Before the fine and suspension were announced Athletics' manager Dick Williams had said that Campaneris was definitely out for the series because of the ankle injury.

In addition to his two-hitter Grimsley slammed a fourth-inning double and a run-scoring single in the sixth inning as the Reds nibbled at starter Dock Ellis and the first two of three relievers for their seven runs.

One of three Pittsburgh errors gave the Reds a run in the first inning and they scored two more in each of the fourth, sixth and seventh innings.

A fourth-inning single and seventh-inning home run, both by Roberto Clemente, were the only hits given up by the hard-throwing lefthander.

The Pirates, who defeated Baltimore in the 1971 world series, had moved within one game of a series' berth with a 3-2 decision Monday after the Reds had evened the set at 1-1 on Sunday with a 5-3 victory.

Catcher Manny Sanguillen, victim of the three stolen bases Tuesday, was the Monday hero for Pittsburgh, slamming a home run in the fifth inning and driving in the winner in the eighth.

Starters Nelson Briles of Pittsburgh and Gary Nolan weren't around at the finish, Briles giving away to the eventual winner, Bruce Kison in the seventh and Nolan being replaced by Pedro Borbon also in the seventh. Borbon lasted less than an inning but Clay Carroll, who replaced him, took the loss.

Bobby Tolan and Tony Perez each slammed two-run doubles in the first inning for the Reds on Sunday and clutch relief pitching by Tom Hall produced the Cincinnati win. Hall took over in the fifth inning from Jack Billingham and handcuffed the Pirates the rest of the way.

Pittsburgh relievers Bob Johnson, Bruce Kison, Ramon Hernandez and Dave Giusti checked the Reds after the first inning, except for a home run by Joe Morgan in the eighth, but the Pirates never could develop a threat against Hall.

The series' winners meet in the best-of-seven world series starting Saturday.

Today's television coverage of the baseball playoffs will start at 10:30 a.m. with the Oakland-Detroit fourth game. The deciding game of the Pittsburgh-Cincinnati series will be joined in progress after the American League game.

Boxing Club Gains Final

London Boxing Club cruised into the final of the Victoria and District Soccer League's McGavin Cup competition Tuesday night.

A bitter wind kept the Royal Athletic Park crowd small but fans who did go saw the Boxers play attractive soccer as they downed Gorge Molsons, 5-2.

Boxing Club, which shares the lead in the league's Division I with Victoria West, took command early and led, 3-0, at half time.

Inside-forward George Pakos and linkman George Hyne, both playing at top form, scored three goals between them. Pakos had one and Hyne and John Lear got two each. Danny Bell scored both Gorge goals.

Boxers play Oak Bay, winner over Prospect Lake two weeks ago in the other semi-final. No date has been set for the final but it is expected to be played early in November.

Cougars Take Look At New Goalkeeper

Victoria Cougars aren't panicking, but there's a new goalkeeper in the Western Canada Hockey League club camp today.

Cougars, who have a win and loss in two games this season, are looking at 19-year-old Blaine Ferguson, who played last season with Swift Current Broncos.

Ferguson, who appeared in 21 games and compiled a 4.37 goals against average during the 1971-72 campaign, will work out with the team in preparation for Saturday's home game against the powerful Edmonton Oil Kings.

"Ferguson is here on a look-see basis," general manager Eric Bishop said Tuesday. "If coach Pechet wants him in the lineup, we'll come to an agreement with Swift Current."

In addition to Ferguson, Pechet has 19-year-old Sam Clegg, who played well in the opener but was somewhat shaky in a Saturday loss to Calgary Centennials, and 15-year-old Danny Rogers, a rookie.

Forwards Neil Melnyk and Leif Jacobsen, obtained last week from Medicine Hat Tigers, arrived in Victoria on the weekend and took part in practice Tuesday.

Centennials capped a four-game trip to the West Coast by playing to a 3-3 tie with the Nats in Vancouver Tuesday night.

Calgary and New Westminster fought a 2-2 deadlock on Sunday and the Nats scored their first-ever win over Centennials, 3-2, on Monday.

In other Tuesday action, Flin Flon Bombers edged Regina Pats, 6-5, and Saskatoon Blades eked out a 1-0 win over Swift Current Broncos.

On the weekend, Edmonton Oil Kings thrashed Flin Flon, 9-1; Swift Current blasted Flin Flon, 6-1, while Brandon Wheats shaded Regina, 6-5.

Henderson Ready To Start Against Canadiens Tonight

With Paul Henderson back on skates in practice, Toronto Maple Leafs are as ready as can be expected for a visit tonight from Montreal Canadiens.

Henderson, a 38-goal scorer last season and a hero of Team Canada's recent international series with Russia, has been absent from the Toronto team since his arrival home late in September.

He missed the Leafs' season opener Saturday against Chicago Black Hawks but indicated to his lawyer, Alan Eagleson, that he wished to play against the Canadiens.

Eagleson had negotiated time off for the speedy winger because Henderson had been deluged with adulation, "something he had very little experience with. He was terribly psyched up when he got home from Russia."

The nationally-televised game is one of seven National Hockey League games to be played tonight.

And two of the clubs picked by many as top contenders for Eastern Division honors, will be seeking their first victory.

Tonight's game between Montreal and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m. The game between Vancouver Canucks and New York Rangers will be broadcast on radio station CKNW (980) starting at 4:30 p.m.

New York Rangers, who dropped weekend games to Detroit Red Wings and Chicago Black Hawks, host Vancouver Canucks while Boston Bruins, upset by Los Angeles Kings Sunday, are in Detroit.

Rangers, who lost only one player, Jim Dorey, to the rival World Hockey Association, and were considered to have a stacked lineup, dropped a 5-1 decision in Chicago, Sunday.

General manager-coach Emile Francis was asked if he had ever before experienced such a setback on an opening NHL weekend?

"Not since I've been with this club," he replied. "And you can bet your bleep it's not going to keep on this way. No sir."

Boston, the defending division champion, was surprised, 4-2, by the lowly Kings while Buffalo Sabres dumped Atlanta Flames, 5-3, in Sunday's other game.

Coach Tom Johnson's Bruins were expected to be weakened by the loss of five regulars from last year's squad, but not to the extent of Sunday's performance before 15,003 fans. Kings had the worst record in the Western Division last year, second in the NHL only to the Canucks.

"I don't see any reason why we shouldn't repeat . . ." Johnson was reported saying as the Bruins approached the new season without goalkeeper Gerry Cheevers, defenceman Ted Green, centre Derek Sanderson and winger John McKenzie — all to the WHA—and winger Ed Westfall to the Islanders in the NHL expansion draft.

Even with superstar Bobby Orr on the sidelines recovering from knee surgery, Bruins were expected to be deep in bench strength.

Their opening loss in Boston may have given Johnson second thoughts.

Deadline Today

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — After a bid for an out-of-court settlement failed, a federal judge Tuesday gave attorneys one more day to file final arguments in the showdown between the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association.

U.S. district Judge A. Leon Higginbotham set new deadline after attorneys for the rival leagues told him they were unable to reach agreement on the contracts of NHL players who have jumped to the WHA.

All major legal actions involving the two leagues have been consolidated before Higginbotham.

Higginbotham has already said that, unlike baseball, hockey is not immune to federal anti-trust laws.

Miss Whittingham and centre-forward Jenny John of Victoria were among four players named to the national team following the Canadian inter-provincial championships, which ended earlier Monday.

B.C. was runner-up to Alberta in the tournament after Gaylene Earry's goal gave the Prairie team a 1-0 victory in the final.

The other players from B.C. on the Canadian team were Judy Sewell and Barbara Lockyer, both of Vancouver, while Anna Marshand, Jackie Price and Sue Rich, all of Vancouver, were added to the national squad for a tour of England and Wales in February.

Ninth Win

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Bobby Allison held off a charging Buddy Baker for the final 10 laps Sunday and won the National 500-mile stock car race by a car length. It was Allison's ninth major triumph of the year in a Chevrolet owned by ex-driver Junior Johnson.

Lorna, Anne Meet Stars

Lorna McHattie was in deadly mood with the hammer Sunday.

Miss McHattie, who competes for the University of Victoria Track Club, hurled the 16-pound hammer 46 feet, 11 inches.

It was an unofficial world best for the Victoria girl, breaking the mark of 35 feet, set in 1970, by almost 12 feet.

Vicki Clarke of UVic, who was second, also broke the previous world best with 36' 0¼."

The girls were competing in UVic's third annual fall track and field championships at Centennial Stadium.

There were several other good performances at the meet, including fine middle distance runs by Ulla Hansen of Victoria Mercuries who recorded 2:21.0 in winning the peewee girls' 800 metres and then ran the bantam mile in 5:32.0.

Leading woman competitor was Anne Langdale of the host club, who won the open women's 100 metres in 12.5 seconds, the open 200 metres in 26.3 and the open 400 metres in 57.5.

Reg Effa of UVic was in top form over the hurdles.

Effa, who was second to Brad Yakubowich of the Vancouver Olympic Club in 11.2 seconds over the 100 metres sprint, won the 110-metre hurdles in 14.8, fastest time in B.C. this year, and then won the 200-metre hurdles in 26.3.

Another good performance was by Jim Pink of Nanaimo, who cleared six feet, one inch in the juvenile boys' high jump and Brent Olson of Victoria Track Club set a B.C. record of 48 feet, three inches in the tyke (nine-and-under) boy' discus throw.

Roughriders Eliminate Lions Stamps, Argos Barely Alive

B.C. Lions are out of playoff contention and the 1971 Grey Cup contestants have only an outside chance remaining following weekend action in the Canadian Football League.

Lions were eliminated from post-season play when Saskatchewan Roughriders rallied for a 24-14 win Sunday in a Western Conference game in Regina.

It was the 21st consecutive Saskatchewan victory over the Lions since 1965.

Lions have a 3-9 won-loss record with four games remaining while Saskatchewan, at 7-5, has nearly clinched a playoff berth.

The best Lions can do now is tie Saskatchewan for third place but the Roughriders would be awarded the playoff position with a better record against B.C. in league play.

Calgary Stampeders, the Grey Cup champions in 1971, suffered two humiliating defeats on a Thanksgiving weekend swing through the Eastern Conference and are near elimination with a 4-8 record.

Stampeders, who bowed 30-45 to Ottawa Roughriders Monday after taking a 50-24 lacing Saturday in Hamilton, can reach the playoffs by sweeping their last four games and hoping that Saskatchewan suffers a complete collapse.

One more Stampeder loss or Roughrider victory will assure a new name on the Grey Cup.

Toronto Argonauts, EFC champions last season, fanned their faint playoff hopes with a 21-3 win over Montreal Alouettes while Edmonton Eskimos moved back into a first-place tie with Winnipeg by topping the Bombers, 24-15 to complete the Thanksgiving Day schedule.

Argos, last in the East with a 2-9 mark, can still make third place with victories in their three remaining games but Alouettes would have to co-operate by losing at least two of their last three outings. Any combination of two Montreal wins and Toronto losses gives Als the edge.

Winnipeg could gain top spot in the West for the first time since 1962 by winning its last four games while Edmonton, which hasn't finished first since 1957, can win conference honors with four straight victories.

Weekend highlights:

● Bob Pearce scored Saskatchewan touchdowns on passes of 45 and 31 yards from Ron Lancaster and George Reed added the 104th touchdown of his CFL career as the Roughriders overcame a 14-8 deficit with 16 points in the final quarter against the Lions;

● Tom Wilkinson threw a 33-yard touchdown pass to George McGowan and later sent Roy Bell and Sam Scarber over for major scores as the Eskimos built a 24-1 lead after three quarters in the game before 21,654 hometown fans.

Stewart Wins Grand Prix

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Jackie Stewart of Scotland led all the way Sunday and won the United States Grand Prix road race. Froncois Cevert of France, who won last year, finished second and Denis Hulme of New Zealand was third. Stewart set a new record for the race with an average speed of 117.483 miles an hour. The old record of 115.092 m.p.h. had been set last year by Cevert.

Surprises Continue To Highlight NFL

Only Miami Dolphins who have completed the toughest part of their schedule unbeaten, can yet look forward to a National Football League playoff spot with any degree of confidence.

While the fourth week of play maintained the 1972 pattern of the unpredictable, the Dolphins rolled to their fourth victory. The Florida club, which numbers Minnesota Vikings and Kansas City Chiefs among its victims, spotted New York Jets the first touchdown on Sunday and then methodically went about scoring a 27-17 victory.

Bob Griese picked apart the porous Jet pass defence, then went to his runners late in the game after he had rolled up a 24-10 lead. Larry Csonka did most of the heavy work, getting 102 yards in 18 carries.

Meanwhile, the Vikings and Baltimore Colts were the victims in the most surprising results of a weekend which featured garrison finishes.

● Gary Cuozzo, traded away after last season, extracted a measure of revenge by quarterbacking St. Louis Cardinals to a 19-17 win over the Vikings. Cuozzo threw two touchdown passes to rookie Bobby Moore, the last one with 98 seconds remaining and Vikings holding a 17-12 lead. Vikings, now 1-3 for the season, just about pulled it out but a 26-yard field goal attempt by Fred Cox on the last play of the game failed when the ball was deflected slightly and hit the right goal post. Cox had previously kicked a 37-yard field goal and two converts to boost his consecutive-game scoring streak to 130;

● San Diego's improved Chargers cashed in on three fourth-quarter fumbles for two field goals and a converted touchdown to edge the Colts, 23-20. The field goals, by Dennis Partee from 40 and 27 yards, came in the last two minutes — the tie-breaker only four seconds from time. Deacon Jones, who pounced on the last two Baltimore fumbles, and Mike Garrett, who ran for 132 yards in 27 carries, shared San Diego honors;

● Green Bay Packers, tied for the lead in their division, again got a clutch field goal out of rookie Chester Marcol. It came with 30 seconds left from the 37-yard line and it beat off Chicago Bears, 20-17;

● Buffalo Bills, scoring 28 points in the second quarter, rolled over New England Patriots, 38-14. Three interceptions played a big part as the Bills won for the second time to double their 1971 victory total;

● Roman Gabriel was healthy enough enough to play all the game, and that was all Los Angeles Rams needed They bounced San Francisco 49ers, 31-3, with Gabriel piling up a total offence of 520 yards. Jack Snow got 130 of them by grabbing four of Gabriel's passes, two for touchdowns on plays which covered 45 and 57 yards.

Brewer Prevails In Rich Playoff

INZAIMACHI, Japan (UPI) — Gay Brewer Sunday won the world's richest golf tournament.

The 40-year-old Canadian Open champion prevailed on the fourth extra hold of a playoff with Australian David Graham to take the $65,000 first prize in the $300,000 Taiheiyo Club Masters tournament.

Graham, 26, the winner of the Cleveland Open this year, forced the tie with a last-round 70 while Brewer shot at 71 for his eight-under-par 276.

Tournament rules called for a three-hole playoff, and it failed to break the deadlock. Brewer then won the first hole of sudden-death play with a par three on the 214-yard fourth hole. Both missed the green but Brewer chipped to within three inches while Graham left himself 15 feet away and missed the putt.

Graham won $32,500 and Charles Coody won $20,000 for a 278 which left him in third place.

Gene Littler, in his first major tournament since recovering from a serious illness, finished with 281 while Lee Trevino came in at 284.

Cougars Oust Dolphins But Need Extra Time

Victoria Dolphins' season in the B.C. Junior Big Four Football League is over but the second-year club gave it a mighty effort Monday before bowing.

North Shore Cougars needed overtime to defeat Dolphins, 21-16, at Royal Athletic Park in the sudden-death semi-final game and advanced against league-champion Vancouver Meralomas in the playoff final Sunday.

Playing before 714 fans, Dolphins tied the game with six minutes remaining in the fourth quarter when Leon Mitchell's 23-yard field goal made it 16-16. In the overtime Cougars' Chris Bennett kicked a 26-yard field goal and North Shore's final points came on a conceded safety.

Quarterback Cody Pantages, 19-year-old son of Rod Pantages, a former Calgary Stampeder star, engineered two touchdown passes with Shane Ivancoe within a two-minute span late in the first half to give Cougars the lead. Ivancoe scored on a 42-yard play and then combined with Pantages for a 74-yard major score. Pantages got the call to start after Greg Steinbr, North Shore's regular quarterback, suffered cracked ribs in the schedule-ending game against Meralomas.

Gord Mitchell and Jack Munch scored the Dolphin touchdowns. Mitchell's came on a one-yard plunge in the second quarter and Munch took a pass from Ron Taylor for a 16-yard scoring play.

Leon Mitchell's convert after Munch's touchdown completed the Victoria scoring.

Chargers jolted second-place Hornets, 47-7, Sunday at Royal Athletic Park, leaving Oak Bay with a two-point lead over Hornets with a game in hand. Leading the charge were Scott Woodburn and Jim Gardner with two touchdowns each.

Cowichan Chiefs remained in a third-place deadlock with Chargers by whipping winless Juan de Fuca Tigers, 38-0, Sunday. Rick Kitagawa and Ron Bronson scored two touchdowns each for Chiefs.

Playoff Will Decide Uplands Event Title

A playoff is needed this weekend to determine the winner of the annual Thanksgiving Day tournament at Uplands Golf Club.

Marty Smith of the host club and two Glen Meadows competitors, Brian Sluggett and Gary Bishop, finished with net 67s Monday and will have to play off for the handicap title.

Sluggett had the day's best round, posting a 72 to go with his five handicap. Smith had a 73 and Bishop came in with 79.

Five golfers were tied for fourth place with 69s.

With Sluggett and Smith involved in the playoff for the main title, Frank Scroggs and Dave Tribe took over the low net honors with 73s. One stroke behind were Tom Maftechuk and Mike Gray.

Meeting Called

Victoria Regals' president Jack Adams said Tuesday the Canadian Soccer Association has invited the B.C. Premier Soccer League and the B.C. Soccer Commission to send representatives to a special meeting in Calgary in the next 10 days. The meeting is to iron out differences between the commision and the league. Despite a suspension handed by the commission to the league Friday, games were played at the weekend with all players reporting and "qualified referees" officiating.

BURNABY — Victoria Regals clinched a playoff berth in the B.C. Premier Soccer League Monday by blanking Eintracht Vancouver, 4-0, at Swangard Stadium.

It was the Regals' eighth game without defeat and their sixth shutout in the last eight starts.

For goalkeeper Graham Lee, who missed part of the local season while playing for Canada's World Cup squad, it was the fifth shutout and put him in second place in the league, two behind Greg Weber of Croatia.

But Lee had a fairly quiet time Monday, getting plenty of protection from his teammates as the faster-moving Regals dominated throughout.

Ash Valdal and Jan Bentley scored two goals each for the Regals.

Vancouver Croatia had moved into a second-place tie with Regals on Sunday by edging Spartans, 2-1.

John Conner scored both Crotia goals, one in each half. Centre-forward Mike Sails scored the 1-1 goal for Spartans.

Nanaimo stunned the Royals, 3-1, at Nanaimo in Sunday's other games.

Victoria West and London Boxing Club stayed in a tie for first place in Division I of the Victoria and District Soccer League when they both scored victories Sunday. Vic West edged UVic Norsemen 3-1, and the Boxers downed Gorge, 5-3.

Holiday Cross-Country Run Will Become Annual Event

President Ron Bowker of Invictus said Tuesday the first Thanksgiving Day cross-country run will become an annual event despite the "disappointing turnout."

Only about 50 runners entered the five divisions in the meet, staged Monday at Thetis Lake Park, and Bowker blamed the low attendance on the fact it was a holiday and that many local athletes had run Saturday at meets either in Vancouver or Washington.

Alan Vyse of Victoria Flying "Y" won the open men's 4.4-mile race in 25 minutes, 59 seconds and unattached runner Wendy Thompson took the open women's 2.2-mile event in 15 minutes, 40 seconds.

The boys' 17-and-under 3.7-mile race was won by Mike Hobson, who is unattached, in 23 minutes, seven seconds and Jill McLeod, also unattached, took the 2.2-mile girls' race in 15 minutes, three seconds.

The 1.5-mile event for boys and girls 13-and-under was won by Kane Peterson of Edward Milne School in 11 minutes, three seconds.

And a 2.2-mile recreational race was won by David Hambleton of the Victoria "Y" in 16 minutes, 32 seconds.

Next Game: Wednesday—Hornets vs. James Bay, Royal Athletic Park, 7:30 p.m.

Oak Bay Farmer Construction got back into the thick of the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League battle Sunday.

Farmers upset previously-unbeaten Saanich Chew Excavating Hornets, 12-7, at Glanford Avenue Park, handing Hornets their first loss since 1970 and snapping a win streak of 18 games.

The victory moved Farmers within two points of Hornets, both teams having three games remaining in the regular schedule.

Quarterback Christy Sinclare scored a touchdown and kicked a single for Farmers while Jim Tarbuck booted three singles. Oak Bay's other two points came on a safety when their rugged defence tackled a punter in the end zone. The defensive unit also forced Hornets to fumble five times.

Hornets appeared to be on their way to another win early in the game when Jim McKee combined with quarterback Lawrie Garrett for a 12-yard touchdown which was converted by Norm Baker. But the Saanich attack which produced 108 points in their first five games bogged down in front of the Oak Bay defence.

The triumph made up for Hornets' 10-66 decison over Farmers on Sept. 6 in a game in which two Oak Bay touchdowns were called back because of clipping infraction.

Selectors Scan Hopefuls To Play All Blacks XV

Selectors looking for a team to play the New Zealand All Blacks saw plenty of talent at Macdonald Park Monday when Blues downed the Reds, 22-6, in a rugby trial match.

Victoria Crimson Tide and Vancouver Rep players took part in the trial and a B.C. team will be named this week to meet the All Blacks at Vancouver's Brockton Oval Oct. 19 at 4 p.m.

Winger Spence McTavish and centres Eric Meavity and Paul Johnson scored tries for the Blues while Alan Rees of Victoria, who had a good game at standoff-half, kicked a penalty goal and two conversions and Rob Hindson of Victoria booted a penalty goal.

Hooker Dave Docherty of Victoria scored the Reds' only try and Graham Hunter kicked the conversion.

On Sunday, Oak Bay Wanderers won the Victoria Union's second annual Wenman Cup competition by crushing Cowichan, 25-4, in the final.

Cowichan had reached the final by stunning strong James Bay Athletic Association, 4-3, Saturday.

In Sunday's consolation final, Castaways hammered University of Victoria Vikings, 32-4. Earlier in the consolation semi-finals, Castaways downed James Bay II, 16-4, and Vikings blanked James Bay I, 13-0.

Tempers got a little frayed at Windsor Park Sunday when rival teams from the Rebels Club clashed for the first time in the Vancouver Island Men's Field Hockey Association.

There were several scuffles and plenty of pushing when the young Rebels Red shocked Rebels Grey, Island champions last season, by holding them to a 2-2 tie.

Reds, a 19-and-under side coached and led by New Zealand born veteran Craig Wilson, got both goals from Lorne Cairnes and centre-forward Derek Douglas scored twice for the Greys.

Jobless

that Trudeau's only "antidote for these serious and chronic problems has been a promise of political candy."

New Democratic Party leader David Lewis said in Sudbury, Ont., that the Trudeau government bears responsibility for "record unhappiness" among hundreds of thousands of Canadians and a "massive injection" of public funds is needed to alter the unemployment picture.

Lewis called for a massive pubic works program of at least half a billion dollars and an income tax cut of 6 to 8 per cent to battle unemployment this winter.

In Montreal, Bryce Mackasey, federal manpower and immigration minister, said the mid-September figures are not alarming and have some positive points.

The figures showed that the number of jobless declined to 459,000 from 503,000 a month earlier.

"Looking at the actual figures," he said, "unemployment has dropped by 44,000."

But the report also showed the size of the labor force took a bigger drop than usual — to 8,840,000 persons from 9,274,000 — causing the seasonally adjusted rate to fly upward when combined with the smaller-than-usual decline in the number of unemployed.

The degree to which the unemployment rate will hurt the Liberals at the ballot boxes will depend on how serious an issue the majority of Canadians think high unemployment is.

Unemployment rates went as high as 7.5 per cent in the early 1960s and that fact helped defeat the Diefenbaker government in 1963.

But there have been indications on the campaign trail that at least some Canadians are now blaming the high rate on "lazy" people rather than lack of jobs.

Trudeau has recognized this publicly saying that the "welfare backlash" was not unwelcome because it showed that many Canadians think that some people have been abusing unemployment insurance benefits rather than taking work.

is concerned about the food needs of an estimated 1,800 Indians in the area who need to smoke fish or can them for winter provisions.

Lucas is fully aware of some of the abuses regarding Indian fish permits because "there are always dishonest people in every walk of life. I know as well as anybody that some Indians, even our own people, sometimes abuse the permits and sell smoked salmon to white people but that's no excuse for the way permits are being handed out here."

The chief said it is an insult to Indians to say they may only be permitted to take what he calls "inferior dog salmon."

Lucas and his associates are planning a demonstration starting from the Friendship Hall at 2 p.m. today and a march to the Port Alberni federal government building when he and other Indian leaders will speak.

"We were told by local Liberal party officials if we called off our demonstration we could have a 45-minute private meeting with Jack Davis," said Lucas, "but we have heard that talk about keeping quiet before and we don't go for it any more. There's no good in keeping quiet."

Lucas and other band leaders have asked "the old people to come out and sing the chants of fishing in the old days as we go on our way."

Davis is to speak at a Liberal rally at 8 p.m. in Port Alberni and Indian leaders hope to meet him to ask questions if they can't get a special meeting to talk out their problems.

Federal fisheries officer Nick Seymour, who administers the federal government directives concerning permits, was not available for comment in Tofino late Tuesday.

Lucas concluded sadly: "There seems to be just too much greed all around. Indians who have no jobs need all the food they can store to see them through the winter and to help meet the gap between social assistance and their needs. If this problem isn't solved fast there will be real hardship for many families this winter."

Judges Named

Student Film Festival

Three experts in different fields were named Tuesday as judges for the second Vancouver Island Student Film Festival Oct. 20 to 22 at the University of Victoria, and festival officials said the entry deadline is not until Sunday.

Two of the judges will be technical experts, Channel 6 photographer Karl Spreitz and provincial museum display chief Jean Andre. The third, Colonist TV columnist Bruce Lowther, is regarded as a master of the trivial in film.

The festival will begin with judging on the evening of Oct. 20 and the public is invited to attend free screenings the next day, starting at 1 p.m., in the McLaurin Building.

Films entered by students can be in one of four categories: documentary, experimental, free interpretation or animation. The maximum length is six minutes and films must have been made in the last 18 months and never before entered in a contest.

All students must be amateurs and each school may enter a maximum of one film per category. Other entry details may be obtained from North Saanich junior high school at 656-1129 or from Scott Taylor, 865 Newport.

Prizes will be announced at about 6 p.m. Oct. 21 and will go to the first three placers in each category. The festival also includes a still-photography contest with no categories or limitations.

The festival's formal theme is development and application of TV and film in education, and seminars are planned as part of the annual conference of the sponsoring Screen Studies Association of B.C.

Topics of these will include school film-making, underground films, the National Film Board and links between violence and commercial TV.

Speakers for the conference part of the event will include Christopher Sarson of WGBN-TV in Boston, producer of the PBS children's program, Zoom.

Teacher Jane Foster is organizing the festival with the help of two other teachers from Claremont school.

Double Bill Strong

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

It was billed Saturday night as a dress rehearsal, but came on strong as a good double performance.

"It" constitutes the two plays being taken on the road this year by Bastion Theatre's touring company. Before the season is over, the company will have visited almost every school in Greater Victoria, on Vancouver Island, through much of the British Columbia mainland, and some in Washington state.

The plays are The Pied Piper, prepared for elementary schools, and School for Wives, for high schools. Both are musical adaptations by Marge Adelberg of the familiar original plays.

Peter Mannering is director of the plays, and Peter Williams musical director.

There are eight in the touring company onstage who are called upon to act a lot, sing a lot and even do some dancing.

They are Anne Crawford, Maureen Parkhouse, Kathryn Shaw, Ian McIntyre, Bill Dyson, Terry McColgan, Gerry Karagianis and Lloyd Nicholson.

Both plays have been done on main stage and on tour by Bastion before, and both have proved so popular that they were brought back this year for the new audience waiting in schools.

Relatively Speaking Leaves 'Em Laughing

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

The Victoria Theatre Guild left them laughing Tuesday night — and will go on doing so the rest of this week.

Relatively Speaking is a play that lives up to its advance billing: "hilariously funny." And director Rod Symington and the fine cast of four make the most of it.

Playwright Alan Ayckbourn has a delicious touch with dialogue. Even though the stagewise cast waited out the laughs to a reasonable degree, the next funny line might still be lost in the continuing chortles from the house.

You won't catch me giving away the plot, I hope, but picture two couples of different ages, only one of each knowing one of the other; add a slight untruth, then watch the trouble and fun grow.

In order of appearance, the four actors were Brian Lenton and Glynis Leyshon as the younger couple; Jack Droy and Sheila Litt as the other (only slightly more mature).

The first, and last two, are familiar and popular figures on Theatre Guild stages, Lenton recalled for a fine performance last year in A Flea in Her Ear. Droy and Sheila Litt have scored in a wide range of roles.

Miss Leyshon here makes her first appearance with the Guild, but is wise in the ways of theatre from performances last season and on tour this past summer with Company One.

The four added up to as well-balanced a team as one could wish to see and hear. Not a syllable uttered on stage was inaudible anywhere in the theatre (except, of course, those lost in laughter).

Three of the four scenes were placed in the garden of an English country home, and designer Jens Van Draby was given well-earned applause when this set was first displayed.

Relatively Speaking enjoyed a long run in London, and is entitled to full houses for its remaining performances at the McPherson Playhouse.

Dockers Settle Hawaii Strike

HONOLULU (UPI) — Hawaii's longshoremen ended a two-day strike Tuesday and returned to work after agreeing on a new contract with shippers.

Security guards, shop workers, container freight station workers and stevedores appeared at their waterfront posts after the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union agreed on the new pact with four companies.

Winter Color

Quite a few otherwise fine gardens are lacking in one most desirable feature — winter flowers. I don't mean the odd weatherbeaten calendula or the tattered hangers-on among the roses, but proper winter flowers planted up in bold masses where they can light up the whole garden during the dull days.

I commend these plantings particularly to newcomers from the prairie provinces, for there is a fiendish satisfaction in writing home to Winnipeg or Regina about the flowers blooming in your garden during times of blizzards and sub-zero temperatures.

There is no more rewarding, and yet no more inexpensive way to achieve this effect than to plant quantites of the winter-flowering crocuses. I don't mean the ordinary crocus bulbs, the kind which are imported from Holland and make our gardens gay in springtime. I am writing about the special kinds with a natural habit of blooming in the depth of winter.

Of these winter-flowering types, one of the earliest is Crosuc imperati. Its color scheme alone is enough to warrant a big planting in any garden, for the inner petals are a soft, rich mauve while the outer ones are backed with buff and striped with brown.

Imperati has the virtue, too, of standing up under the worst weather conditions our climate can produce, and is in bloom most years around the middle of January to early March. The bulbs run around $1.50 per dozen, somewhat less by the hundred.

Another little toughie with the stamina to bloom in midwinter is Crosuc ancyrensis. I nthis one, the individual flowers are small, but make up for their size by their blazing tangerine color, and in the prodigious number of blooms produced by each bulb. Ancyrensis blooms in February, and the bulbs can be bought for about $5 per hundred.

These two — imperati and ancyrensis — are the most imperturbable of the winter-flowering species, and can always be relied upon to furnish vivid color in the garden at the dullest period of the year. However, there are several other kinds, not really early enough to be classified as winter bloomers, which can be coaxed into flower as early as January by giving them a sunny corner in a protected part of the garden, with some shelter from the worst of the winter winds.

Fleischer's crocus is one of these, with dainty, slender little white flowers adorned with a vivid scarlet stigma. Crocus fleischeri looks so fragile you would think it would shrivel at the slightest touch of winter's icy fingers, but actually it is a vigorous and robust plant, needing only a gritty loam soil and plenty of sun.

The bulbs can be purchased for around 85c per dozen, and I suggest you take a good look at the corms before you plant them; you'd swear each was covered with a jacket of woven cloth!

Cloth of Silver and Cloth of Gold are two fine species. The first, Crocus biflorus, comes into bloom around the middle of February with silvery mauve flowers feathered with deep purple. Cloth of Gold, actually Crosuc susianus, has deep golden flowers tinged with bronze.

The Tommy crocus, C. tomasinianus, has flowers of pale lavender and silvery grew in the original species, but two fine hybrids have been developed from it, Barr's Purple and Taplow Ruby, with much larger flowers and deeper coloring, but quite a bit more expensive.

Fashion Tyrant Back

Let the world be warned. One of the most heartless despots in history is well on his way once again to becoming the most powerful man in the world.

This tyrant is, of course, Baron Homer von Pettibone.

For decades from his castle in Transylvania the baron gloatingly directed the nefarious operations of his worldwide conspiracy, known as SHEEK. His goal: to wreck national economies, bankrupt families, destroy marriages and start fistfights.

"Green eyelids!" he would snap into the gold microphone that connected him to his wicked agents around the globe, And the next day — such were his hypnotic powers — millions upon millions of dazed women would rush out to paint their eyelids green.

Orders issued from SHEEK headquarters in a constant and always contradictory flow. "Red lips, pale lips!" The baron would cry, gleefully rubbing his hands. "Up waists, down waists! Sleek hips, no hips! In bosoms, out bosoms! Up, down, in out!"

Women, Trilby-like, immediately rushed out to buy the required paraphernalia and then rushed home for a shouting match with their husbands.

But hems were what the baron loved most. And hems, fittingly, enough, were his downfall.

Gradually, over the years, the baron had raised hems an inch at a time until he achieved his zenith: miniskirts on bow-legged dowagers. It was then that the power-mad tyrant finally went too far and issued the command that was to prove his undoing: "Midi-skirts!"

The midi was (1) ugly; (2) not worth a whistle; and (3) exactly four inches longer than the hems the ladies had taken up; thus (4) requiring all new wardrobes.

The ladies, as the world knows, rebelled. Since then, having cast off the evil spell, they have sensibly worn whatever color, shape or length looks best on them. It was believed at the time that the baron immolated himself on a pile of unsold Women's Wear Dailies.

But the baron, unfortunately, lives!

A single clue tells the whole sordid story: the latest men's trousers have two-inch-wide cuffs!

From this, it's now clear what machinations the baron has been involved in these past few years.

Recall only how we masterful men for decades wore the same thin ties, narrow lapels and white button-down shirts — smiling snidely all the while at the zany transformations of our poor, weak SHEEK-controlled ladies.

Then, without our knowing it, it happened. First it was — oh, Lord, how hard it is to remember — wide ties. Out went all our old ties. Wide lapels. Out went all our old jackets.

And when the last man had thrown away his last white shirt in favor of bold stripes, white shirts were suddenly in again!

★ ★ ★

And trousers! Narrow belts, beltless, wide belts, stovepipe legs, flared legs and now the ultimate in wardrobe destruction — cuffs.

Let's face it, gentlemen. We are, heaven help us, in the tyrannical control of a diseased mind.

We must fight back. In this hour of crisis, we must behave like men. Or, better yet, we must behave like women and cast off the baron's Svengalian spell.

But for goodness sakes, don't panic! Whatever you do, keep your cuffless pants on.

Up to Las Vegas to check out Lorna Luft at the Sands. Fantastic. It's amazing that Judy Garland should have bequeathed this earth such outstanding talents as Liza Minelli and Lorna. Lorna is making her Las Vegas debut with Danny Thomas who showcases her as no other young star has ever been showcased. Rather than making her just another opening act, Danny opens the show himself and then introduces Lorna. I won't say she is better than Liza, but she is just as good in a different way. She's quite beautiful and, of course, at 19, younger. And she has Sid Luft, her father, for a manager. Sid may not have been the best husband Judy every had, but he was far and away the best manager. All the famous Judy Garland comebacks were engineered by Sid. One night at Long Beach, Humphrey Bogart and I were backstage. Judy didn't want to go on even though the huge Long Beach auditorium was packed. She went on because Sid pushed her on the stage. Now that's a manager.

The jews treat us much better than the Catholics. When I go back to my home town of Chicago, everybody looks askance even if I say I want to go to the neighborhood pub. Vancouver Island scored one of its greatest chess triumphs ever when Danny Scoones of Victoria shared first place in the B.C. Open chess championship in Vancouver during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Scoones, 20, became only the second Islander in history to top this tourney, considered the top chess event in the province.

He finished the three-day, seven-round event with five wins and two draws for a 6-1 record, same as Vancouverites Bruce Harper and Stan Pakosta.

And in the process, Harper, 18, Pakosta, 24, and Scoones left behind them four highly-rated masters — Bob Zuk, Jonathan Berry and Elod Macskasy of Vancouver and Lionel Joyner, who recently moved to Lower Mainland from Edmonton.

Joyner tied for fourth place with a 5½-1½ score; Macskasy was half a point behind with 5-2 and Berry and Zuk both scored a disappointing 4½-2½.

"I'm still sort of stunned," confessed Scoones Tuesday from his home, after completing the gruelling Saturday - Sunday - Monday test which saw him top a tourney with a record 90 entries, at least 20 of them from Vancouver Island.

"But I'll be playing in Southern Vancouver Island Open," he promised, referring to the big tournament scheduled for Gordon Head receation centre Nov. 11 and 12.

"That was a really good showing" remarked Larry Kirstein of Victoria, secretary of the B.C. Chess Federation, when told of Scoones' triumph

NDP Asks NATO, NORAD Withdrawal

The New Democratic Party is calling for an immediate withdrawal by Canada from NATO, NORAD and "other military-oriented organizations," an NDP candidate for the Oct. 30 federal election said Tuesday night.

The candidate, Flemming Hansen, who is contesting the Victoria riding, said at an all-candidates meeting for the riding that he would also like to see the defence department replaced by a department of peace.

About 50 persons attended the meeting which was sponsored by the World Federalists of Canada. Topic of the meeting was foreign policy, defence and UN charter revision and only Victoria candidate absent was Independent Daniel Heffernan.

Incumbent Liberal candidate David Groos told the audience he could not go along with Hansen's suggestion that Canada withdraw from the two organizations because they are vital for security.

Groos said NATO "protects half the world against the other half" and has survived many years without any territorial loss.

He argued that current Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) between Russia and the United States would not have taken place without the existence of NATO.

Hansen, who said a department of peace should have only small arms for world peacekeeping, charged that Canada, by engagig in vast military arms sales, is "cashing in on war around the world."

Groos, Allan McKinnon (Progressive Conservative) and Clifford Stretch (Social Credit) did not reply to Hansen's call for a department of peace.

But, Groos argued that most military equipment sold by Canada to the United States is of a "quasi-military nature" such as foodstuffs and tires.

McKinnon told the audience that although he supports Canada's peacekeeping role in other countries, Canada should try to find some way to extricate itself from such lengthy and "onerous" commitments as Cyprus, Vietnam and Kashmir.

Stretch said countries must not pursue aggression or "we will blow ourselves up." He said Canada must concern itself with the welfare of poor countries and totalitarianism must be opposed.

An all-candidates meeting sponsored by Victoria Voice of Women and SPEC, the pollution fighting organization, is scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday at Victoria high school, Grant Street.

Federal candidates from Esquimalt-Sanich and Victoria ridings have been invited to present their views and answer questions. The meeting is open to the public.

□

Roger Smith, Esquimalt-Saanich NDP candidate, said in a press release Tuesday that "strange as it may seem only the NDP offers the manufacturing industry in Canada the chance for survival."

Smith said, "If I was an entrepeneur, looking for encouragement for my enterprise and energy, I would have to vote NDP.

"This situation is the direct result of more than 20 years of Liberal-Conservative tax policies which have encouraged the sell-out of resources at fire sale prices to the U.S. We have exported jobs and refused manufacturing industries the chance to show what they could do for Canada's economy.

Smith's statement added that what was needed in the country now was a policy that would force Canadians, "if they want to sell out, to sell to Canadians."

□

Donald Munro, Progressive Conservative candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said in a press release Tuesday that William Head, the minimum security institution, is "a miserable failure" which should be shut down immediately.

Munro called the institution one more example of "the most incredible of a seemingly endless list of incredible blunders made by the Trudeau government."

He cited the high escape rate from William Head and a "recent case where a prisoner from William Head was charged in connection with the stabbing of a Victoria department store manager, while the man was on a day leave pass from the institution."

Munro called for an end to "the mollycoddling of known criminals" and a general tightening of Canadian parole practices.

Flemming Hansen, Victoria NDP candidate, responding to Liberal candidate David Groos' recent statement on veterans' affairs, said in a press release that, "Mr. Groos' sudden concern with the needs of Canada's veterans is such an obvious election-time ploy that he can't be taken very seriously.

"In the first place he has no assurance that the pensions for veterans will in fact be increased. Also, if Groos and the Liberals profess to be really concerned about veterans' needs, why have they continually shrugged off attempts by NDP MPs to increase the present benefits," the statement said.

"That was a really good showing" remarked Larry Kirstein of Victoria, secretary of the B.C. Chess Federation, when told of Scoones' triumph Tuesday. "I think he's doing really swell."

Other Islanders did swell, too.

Roger Harper of Victoria topped the unrated section with a 4-3 score; Brian McLaren of Nanaimo finished second in the A Section with 5-2, and Gerry Forbes of Port Alberni did likewise in the B Section, scoring 4-3.

Tournament director Brian Potter of Vancouver said the event was a "complete financial success," and also pointed out that the record 90-player field topped all expectations.

This meant that all the fears about the tourney losing money were dispelled, thanks to the response of all B.C. players in general and the extremely strong Island contingent in particular.

Get On with It—Newberry

Ald. Alan Newberry of Saanich says there should be no hesitation whatsoever in taking a referendum on the question of building a second arena in the municipality.

"We do not need further research or more surveys. The evidence is overwhelming that we need the facility," he said in an interview.

Earlier last week, Mayor Hugh Curtis said he would oppose a recommendation from council's indoor recreation committee that suggests Saanich have a referendum on the arena issue coincidentally with December's municipal election.

Curtis said taxpayers have other services that they will be expected to pay for, and mentioned road and drainage systems that often have been described as inadequate.

"Last year we had a Mickey Mouse referendum on the tourist industry," said Newberry. "I believe council will support the arena referendum, even with the mayor campaigning against it, which is his right.

"I couldn't understand the mayor saying he was surprised with the committee's recommendation. A committee can recommend whatever it wishes and it is council, not the mayor, who finally decides."

The idea to hold a referendum on a second arena, likely to cost about $400,000, was unaminously adopted by the committee chaired by Ald. William Noel. In addition to Newberry, aldermen Leslie Passmore and Fred Seversen were present.

However, even if the four do not switch their votes, they will need another supporter if the recommendation is to be adopted by council by a majority of 5-4.

Harvesting of this year's potato crop on Saanich Peninsula is in final stages with total value of 3,000-ton 1972 crop expected to be worth $200,000. No One Was Surprised

There was to have been a surprise fire drill at Victoria city hall Tuesday morning.

But as so often happens, the city hall grapevine got wind of it and when the Fire Prevention Week event happened, nearly everyone was ready for it.

At 10:05 a.m., a senior staff member strode across Centennial Square. Asked where he was going so early in the morning, he said, "There'll be a fire drill in 10 minutes. Nobody is supposed to know about it. I'm making my coffee break now."

By 10:15 a.m., employees in the building looked at their watches, wondering why the alarm didn't go off.

"These unexpected drills are usually right on time," said one.

Finally, at 10:20 a.m. the fire alarm bell rang and everybody filed out of the building. Most of them already had their coats on.

A few minutes later, following the reading outside city hall of a fire prevention week declaration by acting mayor Ald. Harold Olafson, everybody returned to their duties.

Six Candidates In Running For Victoria's Federal Seat

Victoria federal riding voters will have six choices in the Oct. 30 election — candidates from each of the four main parties and two independents.

Last to announce his candidacy was independent Michael Hallpatch, who filed his nomination papers Tuesday morning, hours before nominations closed at 3 p.m.

Late last month, another independent, Dan Heffernan, announced his candidacy. He calls himself a progressive independent.

Hallpatch, in announcing his candidacy, said Tuesday that bad government was the inevitable result of Canada's political system.

"What's more, the opposition always matches the government's ineptitude," Hallpatch said.

The 50-year-old businessman said he finds "some good things" in the platforms of almost every party, "but there is also a good deal of hogwash in them all."

Hallpatch described himself as "truly independent." If he were elected without being tied to a party, he would be able to point his finger at every aspect of bad government.

Hallpatch said he is convinced that his feelings are shared by a great number of people.

Hallpatch lives at 2643 Cavendish.

The other four candidates in Victoria are David Groos, Liberal; Allan McKinnon, PC; Flemming Hansen, NDP; Clifford Stretch, Socred.

Groos, 54, the incumbent, has represented the riding since 1963.

Hansen, 25, is a fourth-year student in economics and political science at the University of Victoria. A native of Denmark, he has been is Canada six years and now is a citizen.

Heffernan, 21, is a second-year student at Camosun College, majoring in history and political science.

McKinnon, 55, is on leave from his position as a teacher at Sangster elementary school, Sooke. He is chairman of the Greater Victoria school board.

Stretch, 55, a Victoria realtor, has been involved with Social Credit since its early days in the 1930s in Alberta.

Four men are contesting the Esquimalt-Saanich seat formerly held by provincial Liberal leader David Anderson. They are Louis Lindholm, Liberal; Donald Munro, PC; Roger Smith, NDP, and John Tisdalle, Socred.

Lindholm, 47, is a Victoria lawyer. Born in Chilliwack, he has lived here since 1953. He was elected head of Victoria Bar Association in June and is president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society board.

Munro, who was 56 when he was nominated in May, is a former Canadian diplomat and newcomer to the area.

A veteran of the external affairs department, he recently took up residence in Saanich. He served in Africa with the RCAF in the Second World War.

Smith, 29, is a British-born teacher-writer-editor who has been living in Nanaimo. He is a Canadian citizen now.

Tisdalle, 54, was Socred MLA for 19 years in the provincial riding of Saanich and the Islands, but lost the nomination for the Aug. 30 election to Foster Isherwood. The seat was won by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, PC.

In Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, five candidates will be running. They are: Stockwell Day, Social Credit; Tommy Douglas, NDP; Ken Hasanen, independent; George MacPherson, PC; Bill Matthews, Liberal.

The riding includes Sooke and parts of Metchosin.

Region Will Seek More Hospital Funds

Officers of the Capital Region's hospital board will ask Health Minister Dennis Cocke Thursday to authorize new borrowing needed for immediate expansion of acute-care hospitals.

Mayor Arthur Young of Esquimalt, deputy chairman of the hospital board, said Tuesday that the minister's approval is needed before the board can borrow money needed to expand Royal Jubilee Hospital for open heart surgery, for example.

The process involves increasing a 1968 regional referendum, which authorized $9 million for extended-care hospitals and limited capital work at the general hospitals. Only the health minister has the power to authorize additional borrowing under the referendum.

It will be regional hospital board's first meeting with the new health minister, whose attitudes toward transfer of Victoria Veterans' Hospital to the community will also be sought.

If the hospital is to become a community-based centre, it means fewer acute beds than first anticipated will have to be proposed in next spring's regional hospital referendum.

Ralph Loffmark, the previous health minister, would not accept a federal proposal that, if the hospital were transferred to the community, a certain number of beds be made available in general hospitals for the care of veterans.

The veterans affairs department also has stated that it would turn over a "first-class" hospital to the community if the B.C. health minister and regional authorities guaranteed hospital space for veterans.

Evidence that the federal government intends to improve Victoria Veterans' Hospital came in the form of a campaign statement last week from David Groos, Liberal candidate in Victoria. He said the Canadian government has authorized planning for the second and third modernization phases at the hospital.

Phase one, which has been completed, cost $930,000. Dr. Charles Hemmings, the hospital's director, did not want to speculate on the value of the next two phases in case it influenced contractors' bids but earlier estimates placed the total cost of renovations at between $4 million and $5 million.

Most of the work will involve renovations to the surgical wards and, in later phases, the laboratory and dietary departments.

Groos said Tuesday that if the hospital is turned over to the community, it may be "a matter of years" because there are so many veterans in the area.

"Neither I nor veterans organizations in Victoria are convinced that the move is in the best interests of veterans," Groos said in an interview.

"So long as I am a member of parliament, there will be no arrangements made that do not have the full support of the veterans."

Curtis Doubts San-ity

So you live on one of those streets called San Something-or-other and if you give your imagination half a chance you think you can hear Spanish guitars.

Well, don't look now, but there's a man who would like to go plunk on those strings you think should go pling.

He's Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, and he's had enough of this "nonsensical" use of far-off names for streets so close at hand, he told Saanich public works committee Tuesday night.

In one part of Gordon Head, he quipped, "You go down from one San to another San until you're ready for the san."

Money, Resources Short

Clinic Limit: 40 Addicts

B JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Medical Reporter

Victoria's methadone replacement clinic this week will freeze at 40 the number of former narcotic users on its program because it has neither the money nor resources to care adequately for a larger group, it has been learned.

The clinic, administered by the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C., administers methadone to persons wanting to break their dependency on heroin.

Methadone produces an effect similar to that of heroin but the patient receives it without charge at the clinic at 1029 Douglas.

Heroin addiction often compels a person to commit theft and other crimes to maintain the expensive habit.

The clinic administers its methadone to patients after urine samples have been collected to make certain the person is not also using heroin. In addition, the methadone-orange juice mixture must be taken in front of a supervisor, so there is no possibility of it being smuggled into the street market.

However, care given by the clinic involves more than simple administering such preparations. Workers try to counsel addicts and, if the addict is so inclined, assist him towards complete withdrawal.

Once he has withdrawn, the doctor in charge of the clinic may admit him to Eric Martin Institute, where he will be helped in reorientating his lifestyle.

However, the path to withdrawal and return to "normalcy" is not usually as simple as all that, because narcotic addiction is often a symptom of many psychiatric and physical disorders.

The methadone clinic has helped several addicts withdraw, but its spokesmen say there is much more it could do if it operated houses or a farm or fishing enterprise either of which would likely be self-supporting, for the addicts.

Group homes must be flexible, however, with their care patterned after the needs of the individual rather than the objectives system of which they would be a part.

In addition to such homes or a farm, the clinic would like to provide special services that might be appealing and useful to the addict. For example, some persons might be inclined to meditation and, if someone were available who could counsel them on such a topic, it might be effective therapy.

Because such alternatives are not now available at the clinic, where some workers have not been paid for months, it will limit attendance so that it give the most attention to the 40 now on the program.

With a large group, it is impossible to separate persons withdrawing from their habit from those simply replacing heroin with methadone. Such a separation is essential for even limited success.

News to Foundation

Douglas Denholm, executive director of the Narcotics Foundation of B.C., said Tuesday he was "absolutely surprised" that any suggestion of a "freeze" on the number of addicts treated had been made at the Victoria clinic.

In an interview from Vancouver he said, "Only last week we had a meeting of representatives from the five regions where methadone clinics have been established, and no mention was made of a problem in Victoria."

Denholm said the Victoria clinic was set up to handle "about 50 patients a day, or roughly 10 per cent of the addict population which seeks help. But if there were a sudden increase in demands for help, there is just no way we would refuse to help."

He added that if there were a sudden demand for help it would put a strain on resources, but he said, "We would do all we could to meet the need, though we might have a tough time finding funds."

The program is financed by the provincial government, which in turn gets back 50 per cent of drug treatment expenditure from federal sources.

Denholm said he would be in touch with the Victoria centre today to see if there was a problem or a sudden increase in addicts wanting help.

Street 'Pedestrian Death Trap'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis pictured Union Road as a pedestrian death trap Tuesday night, but he is going to have to wait a while before anything is done about adding sidewalks.

Curtis argued with Saanich council public works committee about the need of sidewalks on Union as the committee approved them for three other streets—Cedar Hill Crossroad between Borden and Nicholson, Tattersal Drive from Salsbury Way to Maplewood and on Harrop Road.

He agreed with Municipal Bob Daye's report that they were needed on Cedar Hill Crossroad and Tattersal, but said Harrop lacked the dangers that existed on Union.

Referring to Union's "blind hill," he said he had used the street for three years and added: "We are lucky there hasn't been a pedestrian fatality."

Curtis finally agreed that work should go ahead on the other three streets on the understanding that Union would get future attention.

Test Schools: Extra-Strict, Extra-Easy

Two experimental schools with widely differing philosophies are expected to open next September in the Greater Victoria school district for pupils whose parents wish their children to attend them.

The Greater Victoria school board's education committee agreed unanimously Tuesday night to a plan which would include choosing principals for the two schools by the end of November.

Rough outlines of the philosophies of the two types of schools, called Type L and Type M, were given to the committee, and district superintendent A. J. Longmore explained the L stood for Less and the M for More, meaning less structure and more structure than is found in the average school now.

One school will be set up at Bank Street elementary using either one or both buildings there, depending on the projected enrolment of the alternate school. The other will be established at either the Braefoot elementary annex or the Blanshard elementary annex, whichever is available.

The committee was told that instructional costs will not be increased by the formation of the two schools. However, there will be extra costs of between $17,000 and $30,000 for operation and maintenance.

It was emphasized that the exact philosophy of each school would be developed by its principal "in consultation with others who have an interest in its development."

However, the guidelines for the Type L school included such items as "emphasize self-discovery rather than directed learning . . . foster individuality . . . permit relaxed stress on basic skills required for reading, arithmetic, and communications skills."

The guidelines for the M school include such items as: "Insist on regulated and orderly classroom procedure . . . challenge the pupil by skilful presentation of subject matter by well qualified teachers . . . place a high priority on excellence in the basic skills required for reading, writing and arithmetic . . . insist on high standards of performance in every aspect of the pupil's school activity."

It is expected the board will appoint principals for the schools in November advertise for teachers for them in January, and invite applications for pupils in April.

The experimental project is the culmination of a suggestion made earlier this year by a committee of teachers chaired by Oak Bay high teacher Justus Havelarr.

The teachers' committee planned the experimental project in conjunction with the school district administration.

Duke's Award Program Challenges the Young

A special incentive program for young people has been announced.

It's the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in Canada, a program of activities designed to encourage those between the ages of 14 and 21 to make the best possible use of their leisure time.

The scheme is available to schools, youth organizations, clubs, church groups, cadet corps, recreation committees. Or it may be followed by young people who do not belong to any organization.

It's not designed for the outstanding scholar or athlete, and it is not competitive. Those taking part measure themselves against a set of standards established for each section of the scheme — and they're within the reach of most young people.

The standards have been attached to four principal groups or sections of leisure time activities, and provide targets to which boys and girls can aim in three progressive stages — bronze, silver and gold.

To gain an award the participant must select one activity from each of the four sections and reach the standards prescribed. This way the individual is encouraged to widen his interests. Minimum time in which a person can qualify for the bronze or silver awards is six months, and for the gold award, 12 months.

For males the sections are service, the expedition, hobbies and projects, and physical fitness; for girls, design for living, adventure, interests, and service.

A prime requirement of the scheme is adult leadership. Each operating authoritty should have one or preferably more adults to co-ordinate the activities of those taking part, refer questions to the award office, and arrange for assistance when necessary and assessors when requirements of a section of the scheme have been completed.

Further information may be obtained from the national director, the Duke of Edinburgh's Award in Canada, suite 810, James St. S., Hamilton, Ont. Cdr. G. J. Manson is national director.

Original Served in Tijuana

Salad Calls for Showmanship

By PHYLLIS HANES

Californians who are good cooks are usually expert at making salads. They are especially known for their Caesar salads, which many people think originated in that state.

But this famous crisp dish, made by dropping a whole, raw egg into a salad bowl of greenery is often the subject of some discussion and disagreement both as to origin and to ingredients.

Some chefs say the egg should be coddled, not used raw. Others say lime juice, not lemon, is a must. Most agree that only romaine lettuce should be used. But because several basic cookbooks show variations in their Caesar salad directions, I went on a short search for the story of the original.

The information was discovered, of all places, in the test kitchens of a maker of bottled salad dressings — a company which even makes Caesar salad dressing of its own.

They were generous enough to tell me how the salad was started and that their information came from Annette Ashlock Stover of the Chicago Tribune who interviewed the man who dreamed up the salad, Alex Cardini, in 1967.

Alex first made the salad when he and his brother Caesar had a restaurant called Alex and Caesar's in Tijuana, Mexico. It was a popular spot with the Hollywood and southern California jet set and the dish was then called Aviator's salad, since Alex had been a pilot in the Italian Air Force in 1917.

Simple makings for Caesar salad

As the salad became well known, people talked about it as Alex and Caesar's salad, then as Caesar salad, even though the restaurant changed its name to Paul and Alex's Place. The name on the menu, however, is long. It's Original Alex-Caesar's Cardini Romaine Salad.

In the 1967 interview, Alex Cardini was not only insistent that the Cardini brothers invented the salad, but he had very definite instructions for making it.

The salad must be made with romaine, and the leaves should be whole, not broken into pieces, according to his rules.

The eggs must be coddled exactly one minute — never are raw eggs used. The croutons must be large, flat, squares of toasted French bread, quartered and dipped into garlic-flavored oil. The oil must be very light. A little chopped anchovy must be put on each crouton.

There should be a large amount of freshly grated Parmesan cheese, some Worcestershire, and absolutely no onion; just a little garlic in the oil; never rub the bowl with garlic. The juice of either fresh limes or lemons may be used.

Alex's final directions say that the salad must be tossed by hand in a wooden bowl where everyone can watch. Served as a first course it gives the guest ample time to enjoy the salad without dulling the appetite for the main course.

CAESAR SALAD

- Western iceberg lettuce
- Romaine lettuce
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese
- 2-3 cup Caesar dressing
- 1½ cups croutons
- 1 tin anchovies
- 1 egg (optional)

Wash and drain lettuce. Break into bite-sized pieces to make six cups. Place in salad bowl. Sprinkle with cheese and toss gently. Just before serving add anchovies and pour on dressing; toss lightly. Sprinkle with croutons and toss again. Serve immediately to four. If egg is desired, add raw or coddled while tossing the last time.

From the same kitchens, here is a recipe that uses a spicy cheese salad dressing to make an interesting loaf of bread.

LINDY LOU'S CHEESE

- 2¾ cups sifted flour
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1½ tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon dry mustard
- ¼ teaspoon baking soda
- 3½ ounces pepperoni or summer sausage (¾ cup diced)
- ⅓ cup milk
- ½ cup Roquefort salad dressing
- 5 ounce jar Old English cheese spread, softened
- 2 eggs

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, salt, mustard, and baking soda into a large bowl. Mix in pepperoni or sausage and green pepper. Thoroughly blend together with milk, Roquefort dressing, cheese and eggs. Pour onto dry ingredients. Stir gently just until flour is moistened. Pour into greased nine inch by five inch loaf pan.

Bake in medium oven 350 degrees F 50 to 55 minutes or until toothpick inserted in centre comes out clean. Remove from oven; cool on wire rack 10 minutes. Turn out from pan; cool completely. Store in refrigerator. Serve warm or cold. (Note: this bread slices best when stored overnight.)

'Canadians Deluded On Land Abundance'

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians have been misled into believing that plenty of land is available for everyone, a University of Toronto professor said Sunday.

He said in a position paper released at a conference of Zero Population Growth of Canada that statistics show there are 100 acres of land available for every Canadian,

But he said Canadians do not have equal access to the 100 acres, and much of the land in the North is uninhabitable.

Prof. Taylor was elected as first Canadian director of Zero Population Growth, an organization which believes the birth rate should be stabilized and controlled.

New Horizons Bid Nears

An 82-year-old self-starter is ready to move into the next stage of his proposed project under the federal government's New Horizons program for retired Canadians.

George Willis widower and retired travel agent who lives at 850 Fleming, has received an application form for a grant for his proposed 10-member group of people who would compile and publish a brochure listing all historic sites and places of interest across Canada.

With application form in hand, he has called a meeting for the Victoria New Horizons club at 7:30 Thursday at 850 Fleming.

He needs a turnout of at least 10 retired Canadians. The meeting will call for nominations for four directors, who will plan and submit the project to New Horizons for funding.

Willis believes his proposal meets the objectives of the New Horizons program, which are to encourage retired people to take part in community life, offer them an opportunity to put their knowledge and experience to work for their own benefit and that of others, and to build friendships.

Already he has written to tourist departments of all the provinces for their lists of historic sites, as a guide in compilation of the group's brochure.

The information would be made available to the public in general and would, he feels, be a boon to tourism.

The New Horizons program is administered by the developmental programs branch, department of national health and welfare.

Fruitful Toil

High-Rise Gardeners Give Thanks

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty families living in high-rise apartments sat down to Thanksgiving dinners Monday which included fruit and vegetables they had grown themselves.

They were the lucky 20 of 60 applicants who sought to take advantage of an offer made last May by Beatrice Fischer to provide 20 plots for high-rise apartment dwellers wishing to have their own gardens.

Mrs. Fischer opened up a 1½-acre plot of land near her residence for would-be gardeners. All summer, the 20 climbed up and down the flagstone path to the plot of land, dug, hoed, raked, staked, weeded and exchanged tips and cuttings.

Despite wet and dry spells, a temporary tomato blight and marauding raccoons, the summer's labors were successful and Thanksgiving this year had a deeper meaning for a number of families who in the past have mumbled their thanks for food that had been frozen, canned or chemically-preserved.

Air traffic control chief Aldean White

She's Tower Flower

TITUSVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Aldean (Dee) White is probably the only air traffic control chief in the country who has heard a pilot ask? "Little flower in the tower, what's the runway of the hour?"

Federal Aviation Administration records show that Miss White, 30, who runs a five-man staff at Ti-Co Airport near Cape Kennedy, is the only female to head an air traffic control operation in the United States.

Miss White was one of 25 young female recruits to apply for air traffic control training when she joined the U.S. Navy 10 years ago.

Air traffic control has been traditionally a male occupation because of the tension connected with the job, "but more and more women are going into it now," she said.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for all the people who are thinking of killing themselves — or have already tried and failed.

I am sick of reading about you. I don't care how wretched your life is or how miserable you feel. If you have no interest in living for yourself, then live for somebody else.

Live for the people who loved life and died too young. Live for those killed in highway accidents. Every one of them would like to be alive today.

I once thought of suicide because I had a crushing disappointment. I was sure life wasn't worth living. After some serious soul searching I decided I had no right to kill myself. I didn't give myself life and I had no right to put an end to it. So I flushed the 50 sleeping pills down the toilet and went to work teaching retarded children. I will never think of suicide again. These kids need me. I now know what I'm here for.—Rye

Dear Rye: You've told your story to millions of people. I'm sure you connected with many. My thanks and congratulations for laying it on the line. For someone out there — today's column may well be that most important thing you've read in your entire life. And isn't THAT a priceless word? Life.

Dear Ann Landers: Last weekend my husband and I gave a party for his new boss in our lovely new home. There were about 40 people, most of whom I had met just once or twice. I saw one of thewives pick up a china figurine and slip it into her purse. I decided to say nothing.

The next day when I told my husband about it he was furious at me for not calling her on it right then and there. To be frank with you, Ann, I just couldn't do it.

Next week we are going to that woman's home for a similar party. My husband says I should look around for the figurine and if I see it, take it with me. I feel this would be wrong. Do you?—Mine And Not Thine

Dear Thine: Yes, I do feel it would be wrong. Somehow I just can't condone taking something out of someone else's home — even if you are certain it was stolen from yours. If you should see the figurine on display you might ask the hostess where she got it because you "mislaid" one similar and would love to replace it. Perhaps she'll offer to give you "hers."

Dear Ann Landers: My husband died 20 years ago. I was in my 30s then. At that time I bought a cemetery plot consisting of four graves. After being a widow for six years I married again. Would it be proper for me and my second husband to be buried alongside my first husband? Or should I sell these plots and buy two plots elsewhere?—Looking To The Future.

Dear Looking: You don't say whether or not you have children. Nor do you say how your present husband feels about being buried alongside your first husband, should he predecease you. If you prededease HIM how would he feel about burying YOU alongside your first husband? Also, you're only in your 50s, and you might marry again. My advice is to sell the lots and buy two others and don't try to second-guess the Grim Reaper.

Stage Star To Marry At Age 72

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Miss Paola Borboni, an Italian stage and movie star still single at 72, has announced she will marry soon. Her fiance is Brono Vilar, 30-year-old poet and actor.

"I don't know what it means to live with a husband," said Miss Borboni, once a striking beauty who rocked the Italian theatre world by stripping nude to the waist on the stage 50 years ago.

Vilar said they have decided to marry because Miss Borboni's mother, Gemma, 102 ,does not approve of their going together without being married.

U.S. Canner Starts Nutrition Labelling

NEW YORK (AP) — Del Monte Corp., a San Francisco-based foods company, became Tuesday the first United States canner to initiate a federally-approved nutritional labelling program.

Richard G. Landis, company president, said 34 products accounting for more than half of Del Monte's domestic production would be equipped with the new labels starting next summer.

Each label will list the calories, fat, protein ,and carbonhydrate content of the product per cup, as well as the percentage of a standard recommended daily allowance of 10 basic nutrients contained in a one-cup portion, Del Monte said.

Guidelines for a proposed nutritional labelling program were announced in March by the Food and Drug Administration.

"The Beautiful One"
This wig is beautiful. It's fashioned of 'Elura', so it's soft and natural looking and it has life. I can curl it, style it any way I want. It parts anywhere. It can have soft bangs, or not, depending on how I feel. And because it's capless, with a light honey-comb mesh, it's cool and comy. I like the beautifully natural fashion shades and streak combinations, too. The woman is Me. I'm wearing "The Beautiful one", and I love it.

A Ring with Spring

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

NEW YORK — Engagement rings are keeping up with the times. Like engagements they are becoming much more flexible.

Tiffany, the name that for generations has been synonymous with a diamond solitaire, has invented two new types of less rigid rings, though their designer, Donald Claflin, says they're no sociological commentary on love or marriage.

"I've just noticed that most women have trouble wearing rings," he says. "The problem is size. When a ring is big enough to slip over the knuckle, it's often too big for the finger. It's uncomfortable and the stone keeps slipping around."

One of the solutions is a ring with a spring. It snaps open for putting on and snaps together again when it's in place. His idea is already so popular that Tiffany has made a new sizer for girls who are trying one on. "Any of our rings can be made this way," says Claflin.

Claflin has also rejuvenated Tiffany's most traditional setting. The new version does away with prongs. Built like a bridge, it supports the diamond by pressure without visible means of support.

"Young people want a pretty ring. Diamonds are still number one in spite of their protests against the Establishment, but they also like them treated in a contemporary way and even with a touch of fantasy," Claflin says.

Much as he likes the familiar engagement ring look, he also likes setting the baguette right into a wide band. It's a process the goldsmiths used in the Renaissance.

His piece of fantasy is the ring that he calls a finger bracelet. It's a real pull-on, completely soft and flexible, which stretches over the knuckle and settles into place below. One of the designer's own favorite versions is the ring made of three strands of baguettes with a row of sapphires between two of diamonds.

In Victorian times the flexible technique was called Castellani beading. Tiffany plans to use it more and more. Already Claflin has made a collection of soft little bracelets with exactly the same look as the rings. One enthusiastic customer wears half a dozen real bracelets with four finger bracelets.

Since jewelry these days follows close on the heels of what's going on in the rest of the world, Tiffany's latest designs are deep in African wildlife. A waist-length necklace of carved ivory fangs, made from a 50-year-old tusk of an elephant, has already been bought by Mrs. Jacques Bloch, whose husband owns the Tree Tops Hotel. Also for Mrs. Bloch are the new elephant hair bracelets finished with little gold facsimiles of elephant's hoofs. The rare green garnet given to her by an African chief has been set in one of the new clip-on rings.

One of Tiffany's young designers, Sonja Eunis, has revived the Oriental snake bracelet. Actually her version comes in two parts, one worn above the elbow and the other below, so that the gold serpent seems to wind down the arm from shoulder to hand.

"Like clothes, jewelry is going back to the classics," says Claflin, but it's a new definition of the word.

IN MEMORIAM

HOULIHAN — In loving memory of my sweet sister, Maimie Houlihan, who passed away Oct. 9, 1968.
No one knows how I miss you,
Life has never been the same.
In my heart your sweet memory lingers,
Sweetly, tender, fond and true.
Resting peacefully with God in Heaven.
A beautiful angel, sweet Maimie,
I always think of you.
Always remembered by her loving brother, Jimmie Houlihan.

RUTHERFORD — In loving memory of my dear husband Jim Rutherford who passed away on Oct. 11, 1969.
The pearly gates were opened,
A gentle voice said "Come"
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.
—From May.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

One of the more surprising aspects of the new TV season is the number of new series which seem to have caught on with the public.

Any show making the top 30 in ratings consistently is considered a winner and ratings for the first two weeks of the season have Bridget Loves Bernie sixth, Maude 11th Paul Lynde 14th, Banacek 20th, Ghost Story 22nd, Little People 25th and The Rookies 27th. In the 31-40 range, which isn't bad, are Banyon, Julie Andrews, Bob Newhart, Bill Cosby, and Search.

The losers include M.A.S.H., The Waltons, Temperatures Rising, Streets of San Francisco and Anna and the King. Another loser was CBS, perennial leader among the networks — it averaged a rating of 17 to NBC's leading 20.6 and ABC's 19.2, mainly because of low-rated movies.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's answer — One of the most consistently funny series in TV history was Sgt. Bilko, alias You'll Never Get Rich, alias The Phil Silvers Show. His chesty girlfriend was played by Elizabeth Fraser and, if you think that was difficult, I could have asked for the names of Harvey Lembeck and all the other bananas.

Today's question — No Time for Sergeants was a funny book, then a funny movie and finally an unfunny TV series. All you have to do is name the actor who starred in the movie and the one in the series. The answers Thursday.

12:00 noon — Phantom Lady (1944 wartime whodunit), Franchot Tone. The difference between a wartime whodunit movie and one in peacetime was nobody cared in wartime; you just went to sit in the back row — 13.

C-12:45 — Ladies' Man (1962 spies), Eddie Constantine. Yawn — 6, 8.

4:00 p.m. — Anna and the King of Siam (enjoyable 1946 original, part two), Rex Harrison, Irene Dunne—5.

C-4:00 — Jason and the Argonauts (1963 mythology, neat fun). The special effects steal the show, which includes Nancy Kovack — 7.

C-7:30 — I Was a Male War Bride (so-so 1949 comedy). If youn dig Cary Grant in drag, swish over to the set and turn it on — 13.

C-8:00 — McClintock (1963 John Wayne). Plus Marueen O'Hara, Yvonne deCarlo and more but a Wyne flick is a Wayne flick — 8.

C-8:30 — Lieutenant Schuster's wife (new whodunit). Lee Grant, one of the finest actresses of the day, seeks her husband's killer — 4.

C-11:30 — Watusi (1959 George Montgomery). So much action footage was left from the Stewart Granger version of King Solomon's Mines that they made the film again and that's the truth — 7, 12.

11:50 — Fort Apache (Good 1948 John Ford western drama), John Wayne, Henry Fonda, Shirley Temple. An above-average film — 2.

12:00 — Anything Can Happen (Fairish 1952 immigrant comedy-drama), Jose Ferrer, Kim Hunter. Moving to the U.S. used to be everyone's goal—6, 8.

12:30 a.m. — Sally and St. Ann (poorish 1952 fantasy), Ann Blyth, Edmund Gwenn. Not moving at all — 13.

1:35 — Road to Utopia (1945 Bing Crosby-Bob Hope). The most fun is in counting the inside jokes, which today's young don't dig — 12.

7:00 p.m. — Choral Concert completes The Trojans by Berlioz—CBU-FM (105.7).

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc, for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.
2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.
3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.
4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.
5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.
7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.
8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call.

School Administration Change Carried Out

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

A complete reorganization of the central administration of the Greater Victoria school district is expected to be carried out by the end of this month, board chairman Allan McKinnon said Saturday.

McKinnon said the administration was being reorganized in line with recommendations made in a management study of the district, the report of which was handed down earlier this week.

The reorganization of the central administration is the first step the school board is taking to implement the report, prepared by Price Waterhouse Associates of Vancouver.

The next step is likely to be a reorganization of the board's own committee structure to conform with the new administrative set-up, McKinnon said, and this could be done before November committee meetings.

Other recommendations will likely be implemented over the next few months with major changes in financial procedures being brought in for the next fiscal year which begins in January.

At a closed board meeting held last week, the board approved the report in principle and decided to have the administration reorganized at once and have district superintendent A. J. Longmore make recommendations on the other suggestions in the report.

The administrative reorganization "is going to lead to quite a new look in the school district," McKinnon said.

In the present structure, four department heads report to Longmore — director of instruction John Wiens, director of construction and maintenance Sig Dietz, director of development, personnel and research Glenn Wall, and secretary-treasurer Ernie Shaw who is also in charge of most business matters of the district.

Also reporting directly to Longmore is community information officer Bill Stavdal.

Under the new structure the instruction department will be split in two with Wiens becoming director of instruction-administration and G. A. V. Thomson assuming the post of director of instruction-curriculum.

Thomson was formerly the director of secondary education. In his new role he will co-ordinate the planning, development and evaluation of curriculum and teaching methods on a district-wide basis.

Wiens, as director of instruction-administration will work directly with principals in administering the day-to-day operation of district schools and in recruiting and evaluating teachers.

Dietz's department has been renamed the school support department and has been expanded to include in its functions the distribution of supplies and equipment to schools and the operation of the district-wide resources centre as well as the construction and maintenance of schools.

The development, personnel and research department has been eliminated with its functions being spread among other departments. Wall has become associate director of instruction under Wiens.

Research and testing functions of the department have been taken in under the instruction - curriculum department, while its personnel and data processing work will fall under the new business department.

Business director will be Colin Glover who was director of curricular services in the old system. He will be in command of all financial and business activities of the school district, including purchasing.

Shaw will remain as secretary-treasurer but will no longer supervise the business side as well. He will concentrate mainly on the legal requirements of the job including the drawing up of contracts, acting as a signing authority for the board, and keeping board records.

Stavdal will continue to report to Longmore directly in his new job as co-ordinator of external relations, a slightly expanded version of his old position.

In its report Price Waterhouse wrote that the new plan "must give recognition to the basic premise that the most important and vital unit involved in the education of the students of the district, is, and must continue to be, the individual school."

This premise is shown particularly in the financial changes suggested to a system known as responsibility accounting.

Responsibility accounting is described as "a system under which senior personnel in the central office and the schools are held accountable for the forecasting and controlling of the expenditures for which they are responsible.

"By way of example, a school principal would be held responsible for the costs of operating his school. He would be involved in the development of the annual budget for the school within constraints established by the board and district superintendent and, once this budget has been approved, he would be responsible for the operation of this school in an acceptable manner within this budget."

McKinnon said it was hoped this system would begin by January, although it might not be easy to begin it because principals would have to receive some training in the system.

However, if the principals looked positively on the idea as an extension of their roles, they should learn quickly, he said.

He said one of the ideas he liked best about the new system was the provision of detailed job descriptions for all senior administrators. Having these laid down in black and white should save much time and confusion for both trustees and administrators.

But neither he nor the board liked the idea of having formal pay scales laid down for those administrators. "This may lead to a more comfortable life for them, but it doesn't necessarily lead to more efficiency."

McKinnon said he felt the new administrative structure had in part "been drawn to fit the personalities of the people" now in the administration.

Sooke Fights Closure

Sooke residents, particularly chamber of commerce members, are angry over a move last week by the Boy Scouts of Canada and the YM-YWCA's Camp Thunderbird Society to close roads giving access to Young and Glintz Lakes.

The Boy Scouts own property around Young Lake, where Camp Barnard is located, while the YM-YWCA has 1,000 acres for Camp Thunderbird at Glintz Lake.

The chamber of commerce has written to Premier Barrett, Highways Minister Robert Strachan and Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst condemning the closure requests.

Jack Keating, a past president of the chamber, said it was not right for outside organizations to close off recreation to residents.

"Both these groups want help from the Community Chest, but they are trying to keep everyone but themselves from public lakes."

He said local fishermen had been turned away from the lakes, and threats of official action and calls for the RCMP had occurred at Camp Barnard.

Frank Rainsford, chairman of the camp committee for the Camp Thunderbird Society, said the campers had been troubled by rowdies, and there had been a great deal of vandalism at Camp Thunderbird.

The camp, he said, was used not only by Y members but by public school groups, Silver Threads members and various alpine groups.

Newspaper notice has been given of the request to close the roads, and submissions in writing on the issue should be made before 2 p.m. Oct. 16 to E. A. Lund, district engineer, highways department, 280 West Burnside.

Fire Prevention

Week Boosts Safety

Poster contests, essays, fire drills, lectures and demonstrations of equipment will mark National Fire Prevention Week in progress in Greater Victoria.

The Oak Bay Fire Fighters Association stresses that fire prevention is important every week of the year.

In Saanich, the fire department has called attention to its fire safety program, which is carried out the year round.

In Victoria last year, four lives were lost in fires. "This is four too many as far as we're concerned," said Lieutenant-Inspector Dick Warner, adding that property loss from fires amounted to well over $600,000 in 1971.

Unnannounced drills and inspections will be made in Oak Bay, Saanich and Victoria schools during the week. Schools will be evaluated on efficiency, co-operation with teaching staff and maintenance staff, time needed for evacuation and general behavior during the rests. Trophies will be awarded to the winning schools.

Saanich and Victoria are holding poster contests for Grades 1, 2 and 3 with prizes offered to the winners.

Saanich is having an essay contest for pupils in Grades 4 to 7 and another for junior high school students.

Oak Bay firefighters are sponsoring an essay contest for all students in Grades 4 to 6. The winner will receive a jacket and crest and will be named junior fire fighter of Oak Bay.

Victoria firemen will lecture at hospitals, rest homes, nursing homes, and other locations. Saanich firemen will give lectures to residents of apartment buildings.

Oak Bay fire fighters have arranged a lecture at 3 p.m. Friday in the Oak Bay Senior Citizens Activity Centre to outline the different emergency services available to residents. A resuscitator demonstration will also be given.

A display of equipment will be held from 9:30 to 11 a.m. Saturday at Estevan shopping centre and from 1 to 3 p.m. at Oak Bay Avenue Shop Easy Supermarket.

A flag-raising ceremony was held Tuesday on the Pandora Street side of the Victoria city hall to mark the week.

Fire fighters will appear on various radio and television programs.

'Puzzled' Trudeau Roasted

UPI, CP

"Puzzled" Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday was the target of harsh criticism from Premier David Barrett over Canada's and B.C.'s bleak employment picture.

ROAD TO OTTAWA 72

Barrett's comments came in the wake of Statistics Canada's announcement that September's national unemployment rate was the highest in more than 11 years.

The government agency monthly report showed that 459,000 Canadians, or 7.1 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in September, a jump from 6.7 per cent in August and the highest since July, 1962.

In British Columbia 61,000, or 8.2 per cent of the labor force, were seeking jobs.

"The Liberal party does not deserve the vote of any working person in this country. Their economic policies have led to the huge unemployment problem and I would suggest that the Liberal party needs a severe spanking," Barrett said.

He added the provincial government will do all it can to alleviate unemployment through establishment of a special job-creating agency.

In Ottawa, Trudeau all but rejected implementing measures such as tax cuts to stimulate the economy and perhaps create more jobs.

Asked whether the government is puzzled over the high unemployment rate, Trudeau said, "Yes, I think a fair answer is to say we are puzzled . . . we are all the more puzzled because every other economic indicator shows that the economy is booming."

Campaigning in Trois Rivieres, Que., Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield promised Tuesday he would propose soon "specific measures to improve the performance of the economy and get the country back to work."

He told a news conference

Record 1,116 Stand

More candidates than ever before 1,116 filed papers Tuesday as nominations closed for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Progressive Conservatives had candidates for all 264 seats. The Liberals fielded 263, NDP 251, and Social Credit 164.

In British Columbia, Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and NDP all offer candidates for all 23 seats. The Socreds are four short. There are 20 minor-party and independent candidates running in B.C. ridings.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former premier W. A. C. Bennett returned Tuesday night following a European holiday. Asked if he would take his seat at the special session of the Legislature opening Oct. 17, Bennett said "no comment."

Energy Board Eliminated

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

The New Democratic government ruled out nuclear power in the near future for Vancouver Island Tuesday and announced a widespread shakeup of B.C. Hydro adminstration and thinking.

In a major Hydro policy statement, promised by Premier Barrett soon after he was sworn in, Recreation and Conservation Minister Robert Williams said nuclear power was "some distance away" on the Island.

And he also announced a streamlining of Hydro's executive management committee and board of directors and said present chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum would retire Dec. 31.

Kiernan, Williston Fired

Other major points in the policy statement approved by cabinet Tuesday afternoon include:

- The B.C. Energy Board, which brought down a report on the power needs of B.C. till 1990, will be disbanded;
- Former Social Credit cabinet ministers Ken Kiernan and Ray Williston have been fired from the Hydro board of directors and executive management committee;

Indicative of a change in thinking toward Hydro, Williams also announced:

- Industrial power users will face higher per unit rates when current two-year contracts come up for renegotiation with the government;
- Hydro will be told to "clean up the mess" of the environment it leaves behind and this would probably force rates up;
- Domestic power users were not faced with an "imminent" Hydro rate increase.
- A full and detailed study will be made of routes for the further linking of the Island to the mainland power grid system.

Side with Keenleyside

Williams said the government would thank the members of the B.C. Energy Board Shrum, Arthur Paget, James Sinclair, Dr. Harry Angus and Dr. Hugh Keenleyside for their year of intensive effort and their appointments would be rescinded.

The NDP government sided with Keenleyside and consultants Montreal Engineering Company in opposing development of nuclear power on the Island.

In a press conference to announce government Hydro policy, Williams reiterated the consultant's view that B.C. should first develop its economically attractive sources of hydro and conventional thermal power.

By postponing its entry into the nuclear field, the province could take advantage of further advances in nuclear power technology that would be made in the meantime.

In the administration shuffle, Williams appointed himself to the executive management committee along with

Heath Planning Negative Tax To Help Poor

LONDON (CP) — In a surprise move, the British government has announced proposals for a radical overhaul of the income tax system which would cost the treasury nearly $3.25 billion and enhance the earnings of the lower paid.

In effect, the proposals call for a comprehensive streamlining of the current system to establish a kind of negative income tax with most of the increased credits going to those earning less than the national industrial average.

But the plan, set out in a government document Tuesday, is unlikely to take effect in any form for at least five years.

It will be studied by a select Commons committee and views of the public will be sought before any final decisions are made.

If the negative system is adopted, the present pay-as-you-earn system will be scrapped.

The aim is to bring together in one calculation what people pay to the state and get back in social security benefits as well as to eliminate many forms of means tests.

Under the current arrangement, personal tax allowances are set against income through a code system which tells the employer how much pay is free of tax. He then deducts tax from the rest of the employee's salary.

If a negative tax was adopted, the employee would pay a single rate of tax — 30 per cent — on his whole income but get a credit, instead of allowances, depending on his personal and family circumstances.

Where the tax credit was more than the tax due which could happen frequently with the lower-paid and pensioners, the government would pay the difference.

Wine, Ale Go Back to Uncle Ben

Apples Polished Off

It all looked "very nice," said Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he wasn't tempted.

Macdonald received several gifts from B.C. brewery magnate Ben Ginter of Prince George last Friday, and Tuesday he sent them all back except for four red apples.

Ginter
Offer . . .

In the box were samples of Uncle Ben's Duddle Duck wines, Wise Old Owl ale and 10 red apples.

As for the four missing apples, Macdonald explained in a letter to Ginter:

"The girls in my house swallowed them right down before I got home. I told them about Eve and her apple, but they didn't get the point."

Macdonald said the apples had caused "one heck of a domestic row" and a following vote on the return of the gift was tied two to two. The attorney-general decided his vote carried more weight than the others, and returned the remaining apples and liquor.

In his letter, Macdonald said:

"I appreciate good intentions but cannot help thinking of the alderman who received a gold watch from a city contractor. He sent it back saying — 'If this is a gift it is too generous, and if it is more than a gift it is not enough.' "

And his parting word to Uncle Ben was, "Kindest regards, and I will be seeing you at the liquor vendor's."

Byways, Special Places Giant Parks Program

OTTAWA (CP) — A seven-point parks program announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien could double the existing $50 million annual conservation budget of the northern affairs department.

Chretien said it would be difficult to name a specific figure as details have to be worked out.

New aspects of the program would be establishment of a system of historic waterways historic land trails and scenic land routes.

The long-range plan will extend existing plans for canal systems, national marine parks, national landmarks and linear parks along Canada's remaining wilderness rivers.

Goal of the plan will be to "enhance the quality of Canadian life and to answer the demands of this country's growing and urbanized population for outdoor recreation," Chretien said.

The program, named Byways and Special Places, is to include a network of land and water routes used by Indians, fur traders and explorers and settlers.

In a film and booklets shown to reporters, emphasis is placed on the opening of large parts of Canada for travel by canoe, bicycle, by car along special low-speed routes, on horseback or on foot.

The booklet also showed maps of areas that could be included, but department officials stressed that details must still be worked out, particularly with the provinces.

Chretien mentioned one possible byway specifically, a special parkway from Quebec City to Georgian Bay, following the old fur-trading routes. But he added that such a program could take as long as 20 years to complete.

Chretien said that as well as taking Canadians to seldom-seen places, the program will give an economic boost to poorer areas.

Dog Salmon Order 'Insults' Indians

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

Port Alberni-area Indian chief Simon Lucas is tired of "getting the run-around" from government officials over Indian fishing rights and wants a confrontation with federal Environment Minister Jack Davis in Port Alberni today.

Lucas, chief of the Hesquiat band, said Tuesday night Indian discontent came to a head Monday when more than 200 Indians representing seven bands from the Port Alberni and Tofino area staged a protest meeting outside the Tofino federal government building. They were objecting to the way Indian fishing permits are being handled.

Indians have been granted permits each fall to spear, gaff or net salmon, rather than fishing for them in a conventional manner, so that they may preserve the fish for winter food.

The fundamental point at issue is that the Indians regard their fishing as a traditional native right and not, as Chief Lucas said, "some kind of privilege handed out by white men working for the government."

Indians in the area are particularly angry because the local federal fisheries representative has told Indians they may have permits this fall only for dog salmon and not sockeye.

Lucas regards this as rank discrimination. "The government men say there is a shortage of sockeye and we ask who made this shortage.

"I have talked with many of our old people and they say we welcomed the white men to our traditional fishing grounds and they came with big boats and big nets and now they tell us there is a shortage of fish."

Lucas is himself a commercial fisherman sailing out of Port Alberni and readily admits he is not personally affected by the problem. But he

Victoria Ace Tops B.C.'s Premier Event

Island Chess Stars Shine

By RAY KERR
Colonist Chess Writer

Vancouver Island scored one of its greatest chess triumphs ever when Danny Scoones of Victoria shared first place in the B.C. Open chess championship in Vancouver during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Scoones, 20, became only the second Islander in history to top this tourney, considered the top chess event in the province.

He finished the three-day, seven-round event with five wins and two draws for a 6-1 record, same as Vancouverites Bruce Harper and Stan Pakosta.

And in the process, Harper, 18, Pakosta, 24, and Scoones left behind them four highly-rated masters — Bob Zuk, Jonathan Berry and Elod Macskasy of Vancouver and Lionel Joyner, who recently moved to Lower Mainland from Edmonton.

Joyner tied for fourth place with a 5½-1½ score; Macskasy was half a point behind with 5-2 and Berry and Zuk both scored a disappointing 4½-2½.

"I'm still sort of stunned," confessed Scoones Tuesday from his home, after completing the gruelling Saturday - Sunday - Monday test which saw him top a tourney with a record 90 entries, at least 20 of them from Vancouver Island.

"But I'll be playing in Southern Vancouver Island Open," he promised, referring to the big tournament scheduled for Gordon Head recreation centre Nov. 11 and 12.

"That was a really good showing" remarked Larry Kirstein of Victoria, secretary of the B.C. Chess Federation, when told of Scoones' triumph Tuesday. "I think he's doing really swell."

Other Islanders did swell, too.

Roger Harper of Victoria topped the unrated section with a 4-3 score; Brian McLaren of Nanaimo finished second in the A Section with 5-2, and Gerry Forbes of Port Alberni did likewise in the B Section, scoring 4-3.

Tournament director Brian Potter of Vancouver said the event was a "complete financial success," and also pointed out that the record 90-player field topped all expectations.

This meant that all the fears about the tourney losing money were dispelled, thanks to the response of all B.C. players in general and the extremely strong Island contingent in particular.

Nanaimo Trio Killed

The crash of a light plane which claimed the lives of three Nanaimo residents was the most serious of 13 incidents which kept the Pacific Rescue Centre busy over the Thanksgiving Day weekend.

The three were identified as Tony Giesbrecht, who was piloting the plane, his wife Eleanor and 17-year-old son Fred.

The rescue centre reported the Giesbrecht's small plane crashed about seven miles east-northeast of Penticton Penticton airstrip.

Most of the other incidents were minor boating mishaps.

In one, involving a Langford man, a large search was launched, before the man turned up safe and well.

The man, Russell Watson of 2703 Claude, left a Sidney marina about 11:30 a.m. Saturday in his 19-foot plywood cabin cruiser to go for a day's cruise in the San Juan Islands.

When he failed to return Saturday evening, the rescue centre was notified and on Sunday morning a search started involving RCMP boats, Canadian Coast Guard boats and volunteer craft.

However, Watson's problem had been only that he had become fogged in the San Juans so he had put down anchor and stayed the night rather than try to navigate through the thick mist, a course of action the rescue centre described as the sensible and safe thing to do.

When the fog lifted somewhat on Sunday he began the return journey home, but his engine broke down before he arrived. However, he was quickly spotted by a small boat in the area and towed into Cordova Bay.

PORT HARDY — An acute shortage of overnight and permanent living facilities is forcing new residents to live under substandard housing conditions.

A Port Hardy woman, Sharon Allison, is one of the residents who realizes how much of a crisis the housing shortage is. Several weeks ago she went down to the bank of the Quatse River to visit friends.

The friends were living in a shack on the riverbank made of six pieces of plywood slammed together. Running water was the river, light was a candle or flashlight and sewage facilities left even more to be desired.

"It's incredible what people are living in," Sharon said. Miss Allison, who arrived from Vancouver at the beginning of the summer, prepared herself for the accommodation shortage in Port Hardy. She bought a milk-truck and converted it before arriving here. She lived in the milktruck for 3½ months before finding accommodation with friends.

Joe Comeau of the Sun and Sea Natural Food Store in Port Hardy has also felt the housing squeeze — although indirectly.

"During the last rainstorm I had three people sleeping on my porch," he said.

"I couldn't let them sleep in the store because it was against health regulations."

When both local hotels are booked solid in Port Hardy, the temporary accommodation needs have to be met another way, Comeau said. "I know of this one person on a float house who took in seven people one night because they couldn't find a place to stay."

Yvonne Manson, a receptionist and secretary in Port Hardy, used to tell people she lived in a rabbit hutch. Actually it was a 10-by-eight-foot travel trailer that she called home for three weeks. The trailer, an older model, didn't have such conveniences as hot water and bathroom facilities.

"But I was only too thankful to have it — that's all there was."

The trailer also had a leaky roof and during heavy rains drops of water fell on a counter near her bed, splashing her face.

"It's a real great way to try and sleep," she says.

Bathroom facilities consisted of an outdoor toilet and washing was done by heating water on a propane counter stove.

Shortly after arriving from Courtenay, she had doubts about Port Hardy and contemplated returning home.

"I've got a job here, but what good is a job if you don't have a place to stay."

Mrs. Mason now has a place to stay. She is renting an unfurnished house eight miles from town for $200 a month. The only catch is that it could be sold anytime and she would be asked to move.

Tom Healey of Nanaimo is a logger for MacMillan Bloedel in the Port Hardy area and the shortage of accommodation has forced his wife to live in the back of a converted van. Healey, being a MacMillan Bloedel employee has accommodations at the timber company bunkhouse in the area.

He says that not only is there a housing shortage, but also a lack of accommodation that can be obtained at a reasonable price.

Healey says he has considered bringing in a trailer, if he can find a lot to put it on. But the rent on the trailer and lot and service charges make it uneconomical. Healey and his wife have looked at houses to live in. "These are shacks, I wouldn't call them houses."

The accommodation shortage is discouraging residents from living in Port Hardy, Healey maintains.

"If I can't find a place for my family, I'll have to move elsewhere," the father of three preschool children said as he summed up the housing shortage in Port Hardy.

Stan Wamis, a rigging-slinger for MacMillan Bloedel, said that until recently he was keeping his family in a house in Quatsino. It is near Port Hardy and can only be reached by private boat. Wamis said he was sharing the house with another family on a temporary basis and finally had to move out.

"I don't know what I'm going to do," he said. "I know I can't just hang on to my job and leave my family stranded."

Until he finds a place, the expenses of living in temporary conditions are crippling him financially. For a room at a local hotel for his wife and three children he pays $15 a night.

Monday night was the third night his family had been forced to stay there. Wamis said he is also losing wages while house-hunting.

"If I don't find something soon, I'm afraid I'll lose my job."

Black Power: Crash Course

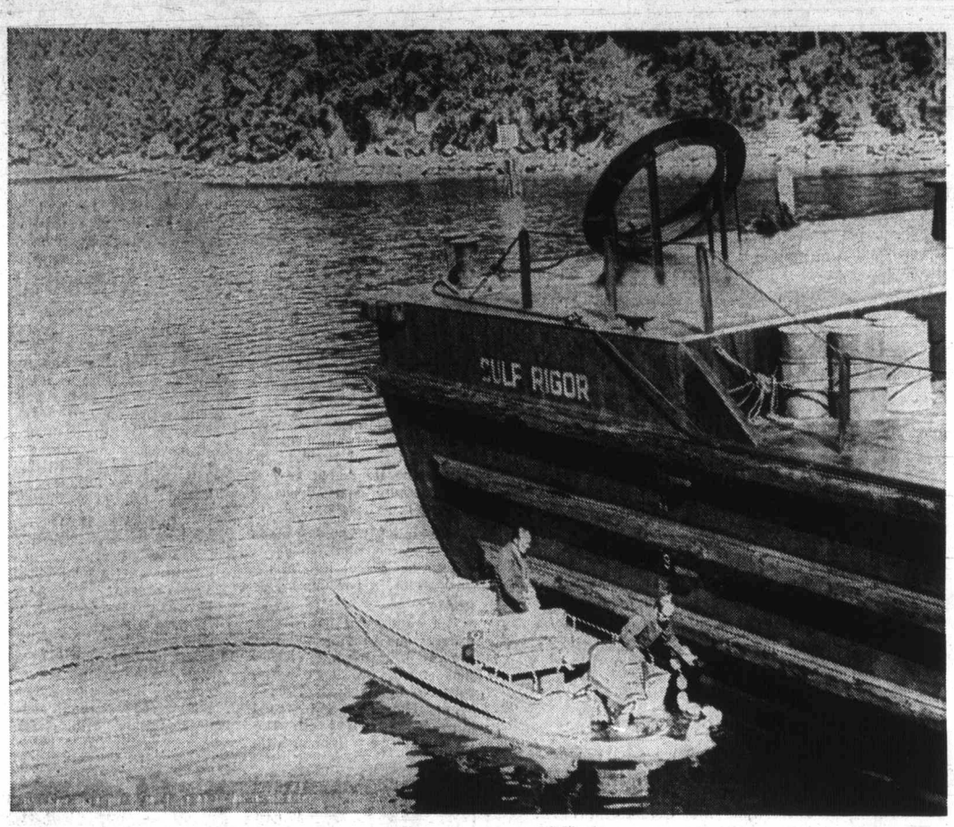
NANAIMO — Much of the area surrounding the city of Nanaimo was without electrical power for about an hour and 20 minutes Tuesday night.

The cause of the blackout was a car accident. B.C. Hydro spokesmen said a car struck a power pole on Bowen Road, tearing out insulators on the pole.

The unidentified driver suffered a cut lip in the mishap.

There was speculation earlier that the power outage had been caused by a house fire in Harewood district which occurred about the same time as the blackout.

However, is was learned later that the Harewood fire department had burned an abandoned building for practice, and that this had no effect on the power situation.



Who Put Photographer Out of the Picture?

Why was the boom lowered on the photographer and was there an oil spill at Nanaimo last Friday? These two questions are being asked today following incident in Newcastle Channel when oil mopup boom was taken there by barge. When oil company officials were asked about possible spill, they said boom was used for "practice" only. However, another official said there was a "very slight" one but they were playing it safe and putting boom around. Finally, another oil official lowered the boom and ordered Colonist photographer off the company property.

Hunting Nightmare

Two Fall Off Cliff

CAMPBELL RIVER — A Cumberland hunter spent overnight Sunday in dense bush with an inch-thick branch through his abdomen after a fall off a 100-foot cliff, Campbell River RCMP reported.

Authorities at St. Joseph's General Hospital in Comox said the injured man, Leo LeBlanc, 37, was in satisfactory condition ETAOIN E tory condition Tuesday night with the puncture wound and other injuries.

RCMP and Pacific Rescue Centre officials in Victoria said that LeBlanc arrived at Comox in a Comox-based Canadian Forces Labrador helicopter about 2 p.m. Monday after lengthy rescue efforts.

RCMP said LeBlanc and two partners, Derek Shaw of Comox and Lucien Plamondon of Union Bay, had been hunting in rugged bushland Sunday night about 30 miles northwest of Campbell River.

When dusk began to fall, the three searched for a lake where they would camp overnight. Shortly after dark, LeBlanc and Plamondon fell down the 100-foot cliff.

RCMP said Plamondon's fall was broken by a stump which protruded from the cliff. He escaped with minor scrapes and bruises.

"LeBlanc fell straight to the bottom. His body came to rest on a windfall and a branch about one inch in diameter penetrated his stomach," RCMP said.

Plamondon climbed down and helped his friend to a nearby stream. He then climbed back up the cliff, told Shaw what happened and the men went for help.

RCMP said their detachment received the report from the two men about 3 a.m. Monday. Police and Campbell River firefighters went to the scene and, upon arrival, decided LeBlanc could not be taken out by ambulance.

Rescue officials were notified about 7:30 a.m. and the helicopter, upon arrival later in the morning, found that tall trees would block any attempt to pluck LeBlanc into the air.

So, a number of hunters in the area who had arrived at the scene carried LeBlanc to an opening near the base of the cliff and the injured man was lifted aboard the helicopter.

Two Hangars Wait for Yes

QUALICUM BEACH — Qualicum Beach village council is investigating the possibility of building a new firehall and has decided that the location of the present hall is the best. It would be desirable to close off the section of Primrose Street behind the hall and purchase the lot adjacent to this section of road.

The new firehall would be constructed on the closed-off section of Primrose and if at some time in the future it is necessary to expand the building, the lot would be available.

Aldermen decided that the village solicitor should be instructed to initiate the procedure to have the section of Primrose Street closed between First Avenue and Harleck. The village clerk has been asked by aldermen to contact the owners of the lot in question and discuss council's desire to purchase it.

Applications have also been received by the village council for the erection of two hangars at the Qualicum airport. Vern Huntley and Reginald Fouty will be asked to submit plans of the hangars they wish to erect. Should council give approval, construction can start immediately after so that the hangars will be ready for use before the winter weather sets in.

Leases will be drawn up for each of the hangars. A third lease will be drawn up for the Aero Club's building and the area on which the caretaker has his mobile home. He took up residence at the airport at the request of the club and with the aldermen's consent.

Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands

Five Aim at One Seat

NANAIMO — Five candidates have filed papers to contest the Oct. 30 election in the Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands riding.

At the close of nominations Tuesday, four party representatives and one independent had filed papers for the federal contest.

The independent, Ken Hasanen of Duncan, filed his papers Tuesday afternoon, just before the 2 p.m. deadline.

Tommy Douglas, the New Democratic Party incumbent, was first to file his papers two weeks ago.

He was followed closely by Liberal Bill Matthews, Progressive Conservative George MacPherson and Social Credit candidate Stockwell Day.

The campaign here continues on a low key.

So far there have been no public meetings or party rallies and the only confrontation between the candidates to date came last week when Nanaimo radio station CHUB broadcast the views of the candidates on an evening open line program.

All five candidates have spent most of their time so far touring other parts of the riding. But there has been virtually no activity in the Nanaimo area apart from the "battle by press release," which has been waged with local newsmen as the catalyst.

The campaign is expected to intensify in this area between now and election day.

Returning officer Fred Spencer said Tuesday that copies of the voters' list now should have been received by most eligible voters in the riding.

Failure to receive a copy of the list would indicate the person's name is not on the list, he said.

Spencer added that anyone still wanting to register as a voter should contact his officer in Nanaimo without delay.

Some Students Led Up Garden Path

COURTENAY — Introduction of activities at G.P. Vanier senior high school, designed to complete the student's daily schedule has met with success.

Results of the new plan were reported to school trustees of Courtenay district by vice-principal John Millburn.

The program suggested by teachers at the school and endorsed by trustees requires that students with spare periods, fill the time with an activity or a tutorial.

Police at Duncan also reported that vandals on the long weekend smashed the front plateglass door at a finance company office in the Duncan shopping plaza.

Oil Truck In Ditch

An oil delivery truck which overturned in a ditch on Seaview Road, Courtenay, on Friday will cost about $1,500 to repair, according to Courtenay RCMP. They said driver Harry Wright, 32, of Courtenay parked his truck on a hill before entering a house on Seaview Road. Before he got back to the truck it had rolled down the grade, overturning in a ditch.

Driver Dies Young

COURTENAY — One person was killed in a car accident, the body of a woman washed ashore at Comox, an 18-year-old was apparently shot to death while hunting and damages in accidents during the holiday weekend totalled $13,800, Courtenay RCMP have reported.

Killed in a one-car accident at 2:45 a.m. Sunday was 19-year-old Martial Gerald Vachon, CFB Comox. The accident occurred on a sharp curve near Tsolum on the Island Highway north of Courtenay.

RCMP said the car in which Vachon was riding was going south toward Courtenay, left the road at the curve and ran into a power pole, ending up on its roof. Vachon was pinned inside the car. He was pronounced dead at St. Joseph's Hospital. Police say investigations are continuing. The car was a total loss.

Three of the accidents involved pedestrians. A 66-year-old Cumberland man, Mike Lukicek, received head and knee injuries when he was knocked down by a stop sign which had been hit by a car driven by 29-year-old Frances Klein, also of Comox. Investigations into the accident continue.

Robert MacKillop, 24, of Courtenay, was the driver of a car which hit 16-year-old Yvonne Louie of Courtenay.

The police report said MacKillop was northbound on the Island Highway and Miss Louie was walking down the middle of the road when she was hit. She received injuries to her head and was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. RCMP said Miss Louie was wearing dark clothes and no charges were laid.

Coroner Tom Menzies said an inquest would be held into the cause of Vachon's death and inquiries would be held into the death of the woman and the shooting death of the youth.

Extensive Survey of Timber Damage

Forestry Crews Turn on Worm

Federal forest scientists are making surveys of extensive areas of Vancouver Island where they suspect heavy and permanent damage to stands of hemlock and balsam by the black-headed budworm.

Five survey crews under the direction of the Pacific Forest Research Centre in Victoria will produce their results within 10 days. They will be taking samples of trees and making egg counts.

The insects spend the winter in the egg stage and those counts will give an indication of the severity of the budworm outbreak that might be expected next year. However, many factors, including weather, will affect egg survival.

Several large acreages of hemlock and balsam stretching from Jordan River up to Holberg, Jeune Landing and Port Alice were defoliated during last summer's budworm epidemic.

The Canadian Forestry Service has used fixed-wing and jet aircraft to photograph the defoliated stands and scientists are correlating that data with material from the Earth Resources and Technology Satellite, which spins over Vancouver Island once every 18 days.

The surveys of the budworm eggs are being done in collaboration with members of the Council of Forest Industries, which in some cases are providing crews.

To collect samples from large trees, the surveyors use a gun that fires a line over a branch which is sawed off. Smaller trees are cut down and the sample is then removed.

Crash Damage Totals $700

There was about $700 worth of damage but no injuries following a two-car collision Friday afternoon at Sixth and Cliffe Avenues in Courtenay. Courtenay RCMP said a car driven by Sharon Carriere, 29, of Courtenay was apparently attempting a left hand turn on to Sixth Avenue when it was in collision with a car driven by Lynn Mouner, 25, of Cumberland.

9 IN MEMORIAM

HOULIHAN — In loving memory of my sweet sister, Maimie Houlihan, who passed away Oct. 9, 1968.
No one knows how I miss you,
Life has never been the same.
In my heart your sweet memory lingers,
Sweetly, tender, fond and true.
Resting peacefully with God in Heaven,
A beautiful angel, sweet Maimie,
I always think of you.
—Always remembered by her loving brother, Jimmie Houlihan.

RUTHERFORD — In loving memory of my dear husband Jim Rutherford who passed away on Oct. 11, 1969.
The pearly gates were opened,
A gentle voice said "Come"
And with farewells unspoken
He gently entered home.
—From May.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

'Puzzled' Trudeau Roasted

UPI, CP

"Puzzled" Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday was the target of harsh criticism from Premier David Barrett over Canada's and B.C.'s bleak employment picture.

Barrett's comments came in the wake of Statistics Canada's announcement that September's national unemployment rate was the highest in more than 11 years.

The government agency monthly report showed that 459,000 Canadians, or 7.1 per cent of the labor force was unemployed in September, a jump from 6.7 per cent in August and the highest since July, 1962.

In British Columbia 61,000, or 8.2 per cent of the labor force, were seeking jobs.

"The Liberal party does not deserve the vote of any working person in this country. Their economic policies have led to the huge unemployment problem and I would suggest that the Liberal party needs a severe spanking," Barrett said.

He added the provincial government will do all it can to alleviate unemployment through establishment of a special job-creating agency.

In Ottawa, Trudeau all but rejected implementing measures such as tax cuts to stimulate the economy and perhaps create more jobs.

Asked whether the government is puzzled over the high unemployment rate, Trudeau said, "Yes, I think a fair answer is to say we are puzzled . . . we are all the more puzzled because every other economic indicator shows that the economy is booming."

Campaigning in Trois Rivieres, Que., Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield promised Tuesday he would propose soon "specific measures to improve the performance of the economy and get the country back to work."

He told a news conference

More candidates than ever before — 1,116 — filed papers Tuesday as nominations closed for the Oct. 30 federal election.

Progressive Conservatives had candidates for all 264 seats. The Liberals fielded 263, NDP 251, and Social Credit 164.

In British Columbia, Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and NDP all offer candidates for all 23 seats. The Socreds are four short. There are 20 minor-party and independent candidates running in B.C. ridings.

Energy Board Eliminated

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

The New Democratic government ruled out nuclear power in the near future for Vancouver Island Tuesday and announced a widespread shakeup of B.C. Hydro adminstration and thinking.

In a major Hydro policy statement, promised by Premier Barrett soon after he was sworn in, Recreation and Conservation Minister Robert Williams said nuclear power was "some distance away" on the Island.

And he also announced a streamlining of Hydro's executive management committee and board of directors and said present chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum would retire Dec. 31.

Kiernan, Williston Fired

Other major points in the policy statement approved by cabinet Tuesday afternoon include:

- The B.C. Energy Board, which brought down a report on the power needs of B.C. till 1990, will be disbanded;
- Former Social Credit cabinet ministers Ken Kiernan and Ray Williston have been fired from the Hydro board of directors and executive management committee;

Indicative of a change in thinking toward Hydro, Williams also announced:

- Industrial power users will face higher per unit rates when current two-year contracts come up for renegotiation with the government;
- Hydro will be told to "clean up the mess" of the environment it leaves behind and this would probably force rates up;
- Domestic power users were not faced with an "imminent" Hydro rate increase.
- A full and detailed study will be made of routes for the further linking of the Island to the mainland power grid system.

Side with Keenleyside

Williams said the government would thank the members of the B.C. Energy Board — Shrum, Arthur Paget, James Sinclair, Dr. Harry Angus and Dr. Hugh Keenleyside — for their year of intensive effort and their appointments would be rescinded.

The NDP government sided with Keenleyside and consultants Montreal Engineering Company in opposing development of nuclear power on the Island.

In a press conference to announce government Hydro policy, Williams reiterated the consultant's view that B.C. should first develop its economically attractive sources of hydro and conventional thermal power.

By postponing its entry into the nuclear field, the province could take advantage of further advances in nuclear power technology that would be made in the meantime.

In the administration shuffle, Williams appointed himself to the executive management committee along with

Heath Planning Negative Tax To Help Poor

LONDON (CP) — In a surprise move, the British government has announced proposals for a radical overhaul of the income tax system which would cost the treasury nearly $3.25 billion and enhance the earnings of the lower paid.

In effect, the proposals call for a comprehensive streamlining of the current system to establish a kind of negative income tax with most of the increased credits going to those earning less than the national industrial average.

But the plan, set out in a government document Tuesday, is unlikely to take effect in any form for at least five years.

It will be studied by a select Commons committee and views of the public will be sought before any final decisions are made.

If the negative system is adopted, the present pay-as-you-earn system will be scrapped.

The aim is to bring together in one calculation what people pay to the state and get back in social security benefits as well as to eliminate many forms of means tests.

Under the current arrangement, personal tax allowances are set against income through a code system which tells the employer how much pay is free of tax. He then deducts tax from the rest of the employee's salary.

If a negative tax was adopted, the employee would pay a single rate of tax — 30 per cent — on his whole income but get a credit, instead of allowances, depending on his personal and family circumstances.

Where the tax credit was more than the tax due which could happen frequently with the lower-paid and pensioners the government would pay the difference.

Wine, Ale Go Back to Uncle Ben

Apples Polished Off

It all looked "very nice," said Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, but he wasn't tempted.

Macdonald received several gifts from B.C. brewery magnate Ben Ginter of Prince George last Friday, and Tuesday he sent them all back except for four red apples.

Ginter
Offer . . .

In the box were samples of Uncle Ben's Duddle Duck wines, Wise Old Owl ale and 10 red apples.

As for the four missing apples, Macdonald explained in a letter to Ginter:

"The girls in my house swallowed them right down before I got home. I told them about Eve and her apple, but they didn't get the point."

Macdonald said the apples had caused "one heck of a domestic row" and a following vote on the return of the gift was tied two to two. The attorney-general decided his vote carried more weight than the others, and returned the remaining apples and liquor.

In his letter, Macdonald said:

"I appreciate good intentions but cannot help thinking of the alderman who received a gold watch from a city contractor. He sent it back saying —'If this is a gift it is too generous, and if it is more than a gift it is not enough.'"

And his parting word to Uncle Ben was, "Kindest regards, and I will be seeing you at the liquor vendor's."

Byways, Special Places Giant Parks Program

OTTAWA (CP) — A seven-point parks program announced Tuesday by Prime Minister Trudeau and Northern Affairs Minister Jean Chretien could double the existing $50 million annual conservation budget of the northern affairs department.

Chretien said it would be difficult to name a specific figure as details have to be worked out.

New aspects of the program would be establishment of a system of historic waterways historic land trails and scenic land routes.

The long-range plan will extend existing plans for canal systems, national marine parks, national landmarks and linear parks along Canada's remaining wilderness rivers.

Goal of the plan will be to "enhance the quality of Canadian life and to answer the demands of this country's growing and urbanized population for outdoor recreation," Chretien said.

The program, named Byways and Special Places, is to include a network of land and water routes used by Indians, fur traders and explorers and settlers.

In a film and booklets shown to reporters, emphasis is placed on the opening of large parts of Canada for travel by canoe, bicycle, by car along special low-speed routes, on horseback or on foot.

The booklet also showed maps of areas that could be included, but department officials stressed that details must still be worked out, particularly with the provinces.

Chretien mentioned one possible byway specifically, a special parkway from Quebec City to Georgian Bay, following the old fur-trading routes. But he added that such a program could take as long as 20 years to complete.

Chretien said that as well as taking Canadians to seldom-seen places, the program will give an economic boost to poorer areas.

Dog Salmon Order 'Insults' Indians

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

Port Alberni-area Indian chief Simon Lucas is tired of "getting the run-around" from government officials over Indian fishing rights and wants a confrontation with federal Environment Minister Jack Davis in Port Alberni today.

Lucas, chief of the Hesquiat band, said Tuesday night Indian discontent came to a head Monday when more than 200 Indians representing seven bands from the Port Alberni and Tofino area staged a protest meeting outside the Tofino federal government building. They were objecting to the way Indian fishing permits are being handled.

Indians have been granted permits each fall to spear, gaff or net salmon, rather than fishing for them in a conventional manner, so that they may preserve the fish for winter food.

The fundamental point at issue is that the Indians regard their fishing as a traditional native right and not, as Chief Lucas said, "some kind of privilege handed out by white men working for the government."

Indians in the area are particularly angry because the local federal fisheries representative has told Indians they may have permits this fall only for dog salmon and not sockeye.

Lucas regards this as rank discrimination. "The government men say there is a shortage of sockeye and we ask who made this shortage.

"I have talked with many of our old people and they say we welcomed the white men to our traditional fishing grounds and they came with big boats and big nets and now they tell us there is a shortage of fish."

Lucas is himself a commercial fisherman sailing out of Port Alberni and readily admits he is not personally affected by the problem. But he

No One Was Surprised

There was to have been a surprise fire drill at Victoria city hall Tuesday morning.

But as so often happens, the city hall grapevine got wind of it and when the Fire Prevention Week event happened, nearly everyone was ready for it.

At 10:05 a.m., a senior staff member strode across Centennial Square. Asked where he was going so early in the morning, he said, "There'll be a fire drill in 10 minutes. Nobody is supposed to know about it. I'm making my coffee break now."

By 10:15 a.m., employees in the building looked at their watches, wondering why the alarm didn't go off.

"These unexpected drills are usually right on time," said one.

Finally, at 10:20 a.m. the fire alarm bell rang and everybody filed out of the building. Most of them already had their coats on.

A few minutes later, following the reading outside city hall of a fire prevention week declaration by acting mayor Ald. Harold Olafson, everybody returned to their duties.

Late Independent Raps Parties

Six Candidates In Running For Victoria's Federal Seat

Victoria federal riding voters will have six choices in the Oct. 30 election — candidates from each of the four main parties and two independents.

Last to announce his candidacy was independent Michael Hallpatch, who filed his nomination papers Tuesday morning, hours before nominations closed at 3 p.m.

Late last month, another independent, Dan Heffernan, announced his candidacy. He calls himself a progressive independent.

Hallpatch, in announcing his candidacy, said Tuesday that bad government was the inevitable result of Canada's political system.

"What's more, the opposition always matches the government's ineptitude," Hallpatch said.

The 50-year-old businessman said he finds "some good things" in the platforms of almost every party, "but there is also a good deal of hogwash in them all."

Hallpatch described himself as "truly independent." If he were elected without being tied to a party, he would be able to point his finger at every aspect of bad government.

Hallpatch said he is convinced that his feelings are shared by a great number of people.

Hallpatch lives at 2643 Cavendish.

The other four candidates in Victoria are David Groos, Liberal; Allan McKinnon, PC; Flemming Hansen, NDP; Clifford Stretch, Socred.

Groos, 54, the incumbent, has represented the riding since 1963.

Hansen, 25, is a fourth-year student in economics and political science at the University of Victoria. A native of Denmark, he has been is Canada six years and now is a citizen.

Heffernan, 21, is a second-year student at Camosun College, majoring in history and political science.

McKinnon, 55, is on leave from his position as a teacher at Sangster elementary school, Sooke. He is chairman of the Greater Victoria school board.

Stretch, 55, a Victoria realtor, has been involved with Social Credit since its early days in the 1930s in Alberta.

Four men are contesting the Esquimalt-Saanich seat formerly held by provincial Liberal leader David Anderson. They are Louis Lindholm, Liberal; Donald Munro, PC; Roger Smith, NDP, and John Tisdalle, Socred.

Lindholm, 47, is a Victoria lawyer. Born in Chilliwack, he has lived here since 1953. He was elected head of Victoria Bar Association in June and is president of the Saanich Peninsula Hospital Society board.

Munro, who was 56 when he was nominated in May, is a former Canadian diplomat and newcomer to the area.

A veteran of the external affairs department, he recently took up residence in Saanich. He served in Africa with the RCAF in the Second World War.

Smith, 29, is a British-born teacher-writer-editor who has been living in Nanaimo. He is a Canadian citizen now.

Tisdalle, 54, was Socred MLA for 19 years in the provincial riding of Saanich and the Islands, but lost the nomination for the Aug. 30 election to Foster Isherwood. The seat was won by Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, PC.

In Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, five candidates will be running. They are: Stockwell Day, Social Credit; Tommy Douglas, NDP; Ken Hasanen, independent; George MacPherson, PC; Bill Matthews, Liberal.

The riding includes Sooke and parts of Metchosin.

Region Will Seek More Hospital Funds

Officers of the Capital Region's hospital board will ask Health Minister Dennis Cocke Thursday to authorize new borrowing needed for immediate expansion of acute-care hospitals.

Mayor Arthur Young of Esquimalt, deputy chairman of the hospital board, said Tuesday that the minister's approval is needed before the board can borrow money needed to expand Royal Jubilee Hospital for open heart surgery, for example.

The process involves increasing a 1968 regional referendum, which authorized $9 million for extended-care hospitals and limited capital work at the general hospitals. Only the health minister has the power to authorize additional borrowing under the referendum.

It will be regional hospital board's first meeting with the new health minister, whose attitudes toward transfer of Victoria Veterans' Hospital to the community will also be sought.

If the hospital is to become a community-based centre, it means fewer acute beds than first anticipated will have to be proposed in next spring's regional hospital referendum.

Ralph Loffmark, the previous health minister, would not accept a federal proposal that, if the hospital were transferred to the community, a certain number of beds be made available in general hospitals for the care of veterans.

The veterans affairs department also has stated that it would turn over a "first-class" hospital to the community if the B.C. health minister and regional authorities guaranteed hospital space for veterans.

Evidence that the federal government intends to improve Victoria Veterans' Hospital came in the form of a campaign statement last week from David Groos, Liberal candidate in Victoria. He said the Canadian government has authorized planning for the second and third modernization phases at the hospital.

Phase one, which has been completed, cost $930,000. Dr. Charles Hemmings, the hospital's director, did not want to speculate on the value of the next two phases in case it influenced contractors' bids but earlier estimates placed the total cost of renovations at between $4 million and $5 million.

Most of the work will involve renovations to the surgical wards and, in later phases, the laboratory and dietary departments.

Groos said Tuesday that if the hospital is turned over to the community, it may be "a matter of years" because there are so many veterans in the area.

"Neither I nor veterans organizations in Victoria are convinced that the move is in the best interests of veterans," Groos said in an interview.

"So long as I am a member of parliament, there will be no arrangements made that do not have the full support of the veterans."

Curtis Doubts San-ity

So you live on one of those streets called San Something-or-other and if you give your imagination half a chance you think you can hear Spanish guitars.

Well, don't look now, but there's a man who would like to go plunk on those strings you think should go pling.

He's Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, and he's had enough of this "nonsensical" use of far-off names for streets so close at hand, he told Saanich public works committee Tuesday night.

In one part of Gordon Head, he quipped, "You go down from one San to another San until you're ready for the san."

Money, Resources Short

Clinic Limit: 40 Addicts

Victoria's methadone replacement clinic this week will freeze at 40 the number of former narcotic users on its program because it has neither the money nor resources to care adequately for a larger group, it has been learned.

The clinic, administered by the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C., administers methadone to persons wanting to break their dependency on heroin.

Methadone produces an effect similar to that of heroin but the patient receives it without charge at the clinic at 1029 Douglas.

Heroin addiction often compels a person to commit theft and other crimes to maintain the expensive habit.

The clinic administers its methadone to patients after urine samples have been collected to make certain the person is not also using heroin. In addition, the methadone-orange juice mixture must be taken in front of a supervisor, so there is no possibility of it being smuggled into the street market.

However, care given by the clinic involves more than simple administering such preparations. Workers try to counsel addicts and, if the addict is so inclined, assist him towards complete withdrawal.

Once he has withdrawn, the doctor in charge of the clinic may admit him to Eric Martin Institute, where he will be helped in reorientating his lifestyle.

However, the path to withdrawal and return to "normalcy" is not usually as simple as all that, because narcotic addiction is often a symptom of many psychiatric and physical disorders.

The methadone clinic has helped several addicts withdraw, but its spokesmen say there is much more it could do if it operated houses or a farm or fishing enterprise either of which would likely be self-supporting, for the addicts.

Group homes must be flexible, however, with their care patterned after the needs of the individual rather than the objectives system of which they would be a part.

In addition to such homes or a farm, the clinic would like to provide special services that might be appealing and useful to the addict. For example, some persons might be inclined to meditation and, if someone were available who could counsel them on such a topic, it might be effective therapy.

Because such alternatives are not now available at the clinic, where some workers have not been paid for months, it will limit attendance so that it give the most attention to the 40 now on the program.

With a large group, it is impossible to separate persons withdrawing from their habit from those simply replacing heroin with methadone. Such a separation is essential for even limited success.

News to Foundation

Douglas Denholm, executive director of the Narcotics Foundation of B.C., said Tuesday he was "absolutely surprised" that any suggestion of a "freeze" on the number of addicts treated had been made at the Victoria clinic.

In an interview from Vancouver he said, "Only last week we had a meeting of representatives from the five regions where methadone clinics have been established, and no mention was made of a problem in Victoria."

Denholm said the Victoria clinic was set up to handle "about 50 patients a day, or roughly 10 per cent of the addict population which seeks help. But if there were a sudden increase in demands for help, there is just no way we would refuse to help."

He added that if there were a sudden demand for help it would put a strain on resources, but he said, "We would do all we could to meet the need, though we might have a tough time finding funds."

The program is financed by the provincial government, which in turn gets back 50 per cent of drug treatment expenditure from federal sources.

Denholm said he would be in touch with the Victoria centre today to see if there was a problem or a sudden increase in addicts wanting help.

Street 'Pedestrian Death Trap'

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis pictured Union Road as a pedestrian death trap Tuesday night, but he is going to have to wait a while before anything is done about adding sidewalks.

Curtis argued with Saanich council public works committee about the need of sidewalks on Union as the committee approved them for three other streets—Cedar Hill Crossroad between Borden and Nicholson, Tattersal Drive from Salsbury Way to Maplewood and on Harrop Road.

He agreed with Municipal Bob Daye's report that they were needed on Cedar Hill Crossroad and Tattersal, but said Harrop lacked the dangers that existed on Union.

Referring to Union's "blind hill," he said he had used the street for three years and added: "We are lucky there hasn't been a pedestrian fatality."

Curtis finally agreed that work should go ahead on the other three streets on the understanding that Union would get future attention.

Test Schools: Extra-Strict, Extra-Easy

Two experimental schools with widely differing philosophies are expected to open next September in the Greater Victoria school district for pupils whose parents wish their children to attend them.

The Greater Victoria school board's education committee agreed unanimously Tuesday night to a plan which would include choosing principals for the two schools by the end of November.

Rough outlines of the philosophies of the two types of schools, called Type L and Type M, were given to the committee, and district superintendent A. J. Longmore explained the L stood for Less and the M for More, meaning less structure and more structure than is found in the average school now.

One school will be set up at Bank Street elementary using either one or both buildings there, depending on the projected enrolment of the alternate school. The other will be established at either the Braefoot elementary annex or the Blanshard elementary annex, whichever is available.

The committee was told that instructional costs will not be increased by the formation of the two schools. However, there will be extra costs of between $17,000 and $30,000 for operation and maintenance.

It was emphasized that the exact philosophy of each school would be developed by its principal "in consultation with others who have an interest in its development."

However, the guidelines for the Type L school included such items as "emphasize self-discovery rather than directed learning . . . foster individuality . . . permit relaxed stress on basic skills required for reading, arithmetic, and communications skills."

The guidelines for the M school include such items as: "Insist on regulated and orderly classroom procedure . . . challenge the pupil by skilful presentation of subject matter by well qualified teachers . . . place a high priority on excellence in the basic skills required for reading, writing and arithmetic . . . insist on high standards of performance in every aspect of the pupil's school activity."

It is expected the board will appoint principals for the schools in November advertise for teachers for them in January, and invite applications for pupils in April.

The experimental project is the culmination of a suggestion made earlier this year by a committee of teachers chaired by Oak Bay high teacher Justus Havelarr.

The teachers' committee planned the experimental project in conjunction with the school district administration.

Recreation and Conserva tion Minister Robert Williams said Wednesday the gap be tween the amount of bulk power used and the amount paid for by industry is even wider than he first thought.

In his government policy statement Tuesday on B.C Hydro, Williams had said small power consumers were paying a disproportionately high rate in comparison to the low rate paid by industrial users.

He sought figures from the latest annual report of Hydro operations but the figures were not conclusive.

Food Oppos

OTTAWA — On the heels of sour unemployment figures the Liberal government learned Wednesday that the cost of living is still soaring with food prices rising four times as fast in the last year as they have in the average of the last 20.

The opposition party leaders wasted no time firing broadsides at the government with their newest stack of ammunition.

The Statistics Canada figures released Wednesday meant that it cost the average Canadian more than an extra nickel last month to make purchases that would have cost him an even dollar a year earlier.

And if he was buying food the jump was nearly a dime.
